LBJ Rocks Session

'Best for Job' Humphrey Wins

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) — President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were nominated by acclamation at a tumultuous session of the Democratic National Convention Wednesday to head the party's ticket in the 1964 U.S. election.

President Johnson himself was in the convention hall at the moment, on the eve of his 56th birthday, when the delegates roared approval to a motion that his nomination be made by acclamation.

HIS CHOICE

Then, taken to the podium and bellowing out "It's wonderful to be with you here tonight," he told the convention that the 53-year-old Minnesota senator was his choice as running mate when he seeks election this November in his own right.

From the podium he went to a seat in the presidential box and beamed approval while the convention ratified his choice.

TRADITION BROKEN

He had broken tradition to come here to do so. But it was a piece of showmanship that brought the convention to life and turned the convention hall and the city into a whirlwind of noise and gaiety.

This was Lyndon Baines Johnson's convention, and his night, and he simply wasn't going to stay in Washington away from the old-fashioned political hoopla that marked the gathering of a party already in power.

ACCEPTS TONIGHT

He will accept the nomination tonight, but it is not to be a day of happiness. It is, instead, a day set aside for tributes to dead Democratic heroes — primarily John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Wednesday, however, was different. It was summed up in the words of Lady Bird Johnson, who watched the Texas-style demonstrations on the floor and said, "I didn't know it would be like this."

NOMINATORS

Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who saw Kennedy killed and who himself was wounded Nov. 22, joined California Gov. Edmund G. Brown in formally offering Johnson's name to the packed convention.

The hall exploded into an old-fashioned political demonstration, complete with air horns, confetti, seas of banners, parachutes bearing tiny American flags, balloons, and songs such as "The Eyes of Texas are Upon You."

'BEST MAN'

Johnson tabbed Humphrey — "The best man in America for this job."

Humphrey and Johnson embraced on the convention platform while the delegates below wild.

SOME DISCORD

All was not complete harmony on the seething floor, however. Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders was nominated by Alabama. Sanders immediately declined and urged the convention to ratify Humphrey.

And Gov. Albert S. Harrison of Virginia told a reporter that Humphrey was not the choice of his delegation or of Virginians. He said Virginia was conservative and that Humphrey had a liberal record.

Aga Khan's Launch Hits Rock

Margaret Shipwrecked?

OLBIA, Sardinia (AP) — Unconfirmed reports Wednesday night said Princess Margaret and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, were shipwrecked Wednesday but reached shore safely.

The reports said Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth, reached shore in a dinghy after a yacht owned by the Aga Khan struck a rock.

The accident is reported to have taken place near the island of Mortorio, north of Sardinia, where the princess is spending a three-week holiday.

The reports of the incident gave this account:

The motor launch Amaloun was skirting the island of Mortorio in the early afternoon. It was moving close to shore when it ran against a rock and ground to a halt.

The rock opened a hole in the side of the vessel and it began taking water.

The passengers put on life jackets and got into the small lifeboat carried by the Amaloun. They landed on Mortorio where they waited until another boat came and took them back to Porto Cervo.

KILLER CLEO BLINDS MIAMI

Storm Toll Up to 60 In Haiti

PORT AU PRINCE (AP) — The death toll in Haiti from hurricane Cleo rose to at least 60 Wednesday night as fresh reports poured in from devastated southwest Haiti, which felt the storm's full fury on Monday.

Gerald Philippeaux, health minister, said the toll is only an estimate and may not be known for days.

The barometer fell rapidly to 29.94 inches and the weather bureau reported it was still going down early today.

It was the first hurricane to hit Miami since Sept. 10, 1960 when devastating Hurricane Donna crossed the Florida keys and flung 80 mph winds across the city.

RASH OF LOOTING

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

As the storm hit, police reported a rash of plate glass windows popping out, trees falling and looting of liquor stores. Most of the looting was confined at first to the central negro district, authorities said.

RAKE RICH COAST

The weather bureau said the storm was travelling a course slightly west of due north at about 12 m.p.h., a path which apparently will rake most of the rich coastline with hurricane winds for 65 miles north to Palm Beach.

Before threatening Florida, Cleo laid a trail of death and destruction through the Caribbean. It killed 14 persons and caused $63,000,000 in property damage when it hit Guadeloupe last Saturday.

Seven more persons were killed in floods on the south coast of the Dominican Republic. Then the hurricane tore into the southwest corner of Haiti with the full force of 140-mile-per-hour winds Monday night.

Premier Fidel Castro blacked out all public reports of casualties and damage in Cuba where Cleo spent about 24 hours, then reported to the world his island actually benefited because of the heavy rains brought to the crops. Before the news ban, however, one death was reported and the government said it had rescued 6,000 peasants from low-lying areas.

Union Approves Chrysler Strike

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers Union Wednesday night picked Chrysler Corporation as its new contract target.

A strike was authorized against Chrysler at 10 a.m. Sept. 9 if no new agreement is reached with the company, smallest of the auto industry's big three.

Three Mills

Province Splits Forests

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lands and Forests Minister Williston is prepared to split up northwestern British Columbia forests in a manner he thinks should result in construction of three new pulp mills.

The minister announced today that he has reached decisions on applications for timber rights from companies seeking to build mills in the north. Some of the companies sought the same timber.

The minister:

● Enlarged the tree farm licence of Columbia Cellulose Ltd. The extra timber would be used to support a $70,000,000 pulp mill with a capacity of 740 tons a day planned for Prince Rupert by Celgar Ltd., a Columbia subsidiary.

● Granted MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. a tree farm licence to supply its proposed $86,000,000, 740-ton-a-day pulp mill at Kitimat. But he rejected a company bid for big three.

Quiet Exodus to West

East Germans Opening Jails

BONN (UPI) — East Germany is quietly releasing West Germans and West Berliners held as political prisoners in Communist jails, it was learned today.

Informed sources said the released prisoners were being returned by buses to West Germany. The buses pass through the East-West Germany border crossing point at Wartha.

NUMBER UNKNOWN

The number of West Germans released so far was not known. The German government has said 12,000 political prisoners are in East German jails. Only a fraction of them — possibly about 1,000 — are West Germans or West Berliners, however.

West German authorities on Monday released East German publisher Guenter Hofe without explanation. He had spent 10 months under investigative arrest for alleged espionage.

One eyewitness reported about 30 casualties including a German television cameraman named Schaeffer.

Stickers Boost New Flag

OTTAWA (UPI) — A letter purported to be signed by Minister Without Portfolio Yvon Dupuis is being distributed to Liberal MPs urging them to buy and sell stickers with the new maple leaf flag design on them.

The letter says the members can obtain the car stickers for $25 per thousand or 2½ cents each and recommends that they be distributed to the most important garage managers in the ridings of members.

The garage managers, the letter says, could then distribute them to each client who buys at his station.

THE LETTER STATES:

"I believe that each member should sell at least 1,000 to the most important service stations in his riding."

The results, it says, would be better "and less political" than if members undertook the publicity push on the new flag themselves.

Thant Recommends UN Cyprus Pullout

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant said Wednesday night he will hand his recommendation on discontinuing a UN peace-keeping force in Cyprus to the Security Council early next month. The force includes 1,100 Canadians. (See also Page 15.)

Thant told a reporter he has given up the idea of expanding the force of about 6,700 men from 13 countries because he has had no response to his request for $2,000,000 in a hurry to pay the remainder of the force's costs, estimated at $15,000,000.

Reports Not True Pearson Declares

OTTAWA (CP) — Reports that the UN is considering an 80-per-cent reduction in the force.

Mr. Pearson said no such suggestion has been received from the UN. Rather, the UN was considering an increase in the size of the force but Canada had received no request to supply more troops. The Canadian contingent numbers 1,130.

Commonwealth Link

Closer to Ensign?

Flag Compromise Indicated

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is ready to accept major compromises in its proposal for a national flag for Canada, it was learned Wednesday night.

Overtures already have been made to backbench opposition MPs by at least one government supporter for designs described as more closely resembling the Red Ensign than the maple leaf

now proposed by the government. (See also Page 1.)

A basic plan of the government's flag platform, however, still is that there should be a national flag for Canada that cannot be confused with the flag of any other country.

THIS RULES OUT ANY ADAPTATION of the Red Ensign, which is similar to the flags of a number of Commonwealth countries and British colonies and is based on the British merchant marine flag — the Union Jack in one corner on a field of red.

But an adaptation of the Red Ensign — itself a variation of the so-called blue ensign — might be acceptable to the government as a flag representing Canada's loyalty to the Queen and membership in the Commonwealth.

At least, this proposition has been advanced privately and informally to the Conservatives by a prominent Liberal.

AS A FLAG FOR CANADA'S national identity, apart altogether from the Queen and Commonwealth connection, one of the flag designs tentatively suggested by Liberal go-betweens in their private meetings with opposition supporters is a red-cal variation of the maple leaf flag.

IT'S BACKGROUND WOULD BE

blue — similar to the color of the United Nations' flag and a shade that also appears in the flags of a number of other countries with long histories of independence.

The overlying symbol would

Two Workers Killed In Peace Explosion

HUDSON HOPE, B.C. (CP)—A miner and an electrician were killed Wednesday when a gas explosion ripped through a 1,000-foot drainage tunnel at the nearby Peace River hydro project.

Three other men, standing at the entrance to the tunnel, were injured by the force of the blast.

ONE SERIOUS

They were flown to hospital at Fort St. John, 40 miles east of this northeastern British Columbia community, where two were reported in satisfactory condition and the other in serious condition.

It was not known whether the tunnel, about 600 feet below the ground, collapsed following the explosion.

BURNING MAN

The electrician was John Robert Gilles, 50, of South Burnaby, who is survived by his widow. The second was John Joseph Durack, 28, of Cobden, Ont., who was unmarried. The injured were identified as Charles Robertson and Michael Shields of Portage Mountain and Robert Sebeasen of Hudson Hope.

A B.C. Hydro and Power Authority spokesman in Vancouver said that Gilles had entered the tunnel to connect lighting and ventilation following several controlled blasts earlier in the day.

A miner at the Portage Mountain dam site told reporters it was believed one of the earlier explosions sliced open an undetected coal seam and gas leaked into the tunnel.

A crew of miners was standing by to follow the electrician to remove debris broken by the blast and to prepare the tunnel for further detonations.

Turning Too Far Killed 82

CANBERRA (AP)—A collision in which the Australian destroyer Voyager sank with the loss of 82 lives was primarily caused by the destroyer turning farther than she was ordered by the aircraft carrier Melbourne. This was stated in a report to Parliament Wednesday by Sir John Spicer, a judge appointed to investigate the accident. Voyager sank off the New South Wales coast Feb. 10.

The violent eruption issued from the tunnel mouth at about 9:30 a.m.

OVERCOME

One of the miners ran into the tunnel to rescue the electrician but was overcome by gas and died. He was carried out by other miners who could not reach the electrician because of the gas.

The electrician's body was recovered later in the day. It was not immediately known how far he had gone into the tunnel before the blast.

GAS BLEW

The proprietor of a hotel here said miners told him: "Methane gas just blew out through the shaft."

The tunnel is part of a system being dug into the walls of the canyon site of the giant $73,000,000 earth-fill dam to carry water seepage after the dam is completed.

NEARLY DONE

Hydro officials said the tunnels were nearly completed.

The deaths were the seventh and eighth fatalities at the $700,000,000 project that encompasses damming the Peace River and building a 500-mile transmission line to Vancouver to supply power by a 1968 deadline.

a pulp harvesting licence, leaving the Kitimat mill in doubt.

● Awarded a pulpwood harvesting area to Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Ltd. to supply a $52,000,000, 600-ton-a-day mill at Houston, 150 miles east of Prince Rupert.

At the same time the minister created the Bell-Irving Sustained Yield Unit north of Prince Rupert and consolidated several sustained yield units into one new crown forest called the Skeena Sustained Yield Unit.

He promised to maintain established logging and sawmilling operations present timber positions and left wide open the Hazelton and Ootsa forests east of Prince Rupert—hotly contested by the various companies—for competition for pulpwood.

The minister said he attempted to give each company the opportunity to compete for additional wood for present and future requirements but refused to guarantee wood supplies for expansion of second-stage plans. "This does not mean that in my opinion there is no room for future expansion," he said, "but rather that plans for such expansion should be based on improved wood utilization and in competition with the other wood-using plants in the area."

be either one or three maple leaves in scarlet red.

Highest government authorities are said to favor this flag even over the maple leaf design on a white background and with blue bars presented to Parliament by Prime Minister Pearson. They are reported now to be ready to adopt it over the advice of experts in heraldry.

The main problem said to be confronting the government and its Liberal supporters is having the compromise introduced in the Commons if it is acceptable to the House generally.

The government's position is reported to be the Queen and Commonwealth flag need not be recognized as an official flag of any other country or of the Commonwealth but merely be recognized as Canada's symbol of loyalty to the Queen and membership in the Commonwealth.

In this context, one of the suggestions made privately by a government representative is that the Queen and Commonwealth flag for Canada consist of the Union Jack in the upper quarter next to the staff on a field of deep blue, with a Canadian device on the fly.

In the Red Ensign, the device on the fly is a Canadian shield; three maple leaves surmounted by the lions of England, the lion rampant of Scotland, the harp of Ireland and the fleur-de-lis of France.

Australia and New Zealand already have blue ensigns as the basis for their national flags—Australia with white stars representing the southern heavens, and New Zealand with four red stars.

The thinking here is that a flag representing Canada's Queen and Commonwealth connection based on the blue ensign would be in neatly with the flags already flown by two other senior Commonwealth countries.

Wednesday the minister announced that the government has established an 18,800-square-mile forest north of Prince George as a necessary step to selling timber rights to two companies planning pulp mills in that area.

The companies, the Cattermole Timber Ltd. and Alexandra Forest Industries Ltd., will be given first rights to two 21-year timber sales which would supply their pulp mills.

Mr. Williston said he based today's decisions on the belief that there is enough wood in the area to sustain three new mills as well as existing operations.

Ceigar asked for a new tree farm licence but instead got an addition to the Columbia licence.

MacMillan-Bloedel lost its bid for a pulp harvesting licence and Bulkley received considerably less than it applied for.

'Best for Job'

With a portrait of the late president, John F. Kennedy, above him, Johnson said his aim was to "find a man best qualified to assume the office of president of the United States should that day ever come."

"I have found such a man," he said.

Humphrey entered the hall with his wife, Muriel; his hometown sweetheart, and Johnson led them forward to take their applause.

BOWS OUT

Humphrey's name was placed in nomination by his fellow senator from Minnesota, Edward J. McCarthy, who earlier bowed out of contention for the job and recommended Humphrey.

McCarthy hailed Johnson and Humphrey as two men "alike in ability, experience and dedication" who would be leaders of a great "party of action, a party of peace, the party of promises and the party of fulfillment."

Earlier in the day, Johnson had summoned Humphrey back to Washington to inform him that he would share the Democratic ticket against Barry M. Goldwater.

Your Good Health

Penicillin Is Not a Cure-All And Can Cause a Reaction

Dear Dr. Moher: At 28 months my daughter had an infection of penicillin, and in a few days her legs and feet were very swollen.

Is there any sure test to prove that she is allergic to this drug? Also I understand that this drug is in measles vaccine. Should she have it? —MRS. R.A.B.

This is a gratifying letter to receive because it shows that some people are aware penicillin may cause an allergic reaction.

Most of the time the drug doesn't, of course. Just as the majority of us do not have hay fever. But some of us do.

NO PANACEA

I hope we are past the time when people demand "a shot of penicillin" for just about any old ailment or discomfort, from colds to upset stomachs. Too many persons have been sensitized by the promiscuous use of penicillin.

The drug is, and perhaps always will be, a very useful antibiotic. But it has to be given with reasonable regard for the fact that some people will be allergic to it.

SKIN INJECTION

Can you make tests to see whether a certain patient is sensitive to it? Yes. The simplest one is to inject a very small amount of dilute penicillin between the layers of the skin (called an "intradermal injection") and note whether a wheal, or reddish, rashy spot results there. More sophisticated tests can be made, but for practical purposes this one gives a very good idea.

As to the baby described in today's letter, the signs are highly suspicious of penicillin sensitivity.

Measles vaccine does not contain penicillin; it has dilute amounts of another antibiotic, neomycin, and she would not necessarily be sensitive to that. The problem should be discussed with the little girl's doctor.

Dear Dr. Moher: My 9-year-old son loves to smell gasoline, and has been doing it for several years. We have spanked him and tried to talk to him but this does no good.

We live on a farm and it is hard to keep gasoline out of his reach as he will smell it from the tractor or other places where he knows it is.

I took him to a clinic two years ago and had them check him over. I asked if he could be hooked anything in his body, but they said no.

We have even wondered if he needs psychiatric help —MRS. F.W.

I know of no explanation for gasoline sniffing, but it keeps occurring with some other children, too.

Apparently it is just a quirk that becomes a habit. For some reason, some of them like the pungent smell. There is no indication that it indicates any deficiency in diet or anything of the sort. Neither is it a psychiatric matter, so far as I can learn.

DANGEROUS

But it can be dangerous for the child, so it ought to be stopped. If spanking and talking haven't done it, further pressure on the boy probably will do nothing but make him more determined to continue—forbidden fruits are the sweetest, you know.

My suggestion is to rig (or buy) some sort of a lock for the gasoline tanks on the farm, only you and your husband having keys. The boy may sniff at the locked tanks, but he won't be able to inhale any strong volume of the fumes. And, of course, take care never to leave any gasoline in cans. Keep it out of his reach.

Dear Dr. Moher: I have been told that if I continue to have my hair bleached, this will steadily decrease my eye sight. I have worn glasses for 11 years. Is this true? —Miss B.

This is one of the newer "old wives tales" that have been conjured up out of sheer ignorance. No, bleaching your hair won't affect your eyesight.

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Nicholson said in the Commons today he has issued an order prohibiting the use of Canadian postal services by the National White

Spawning Menaced By Slide

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisheries officials are investigating a slide in the Fraser River system 170 miles north of Vancouver that could seriously hurt the cyclical sockeye salmon run. The slide is in the Chilcotin River at Farwell Canyon. Huge quantities of rock, sand and gravel plunged into the river last week just as salmon were ascending to spawning grounds. The Chilcotin is the outlet to Chilco Lake and the Chilco River. It flows into the Fraser River which produces the bulk of the sockeye salmon for the B.C. cycle. Biologists say there is little chance of clearing the canyon by artificial means in time, but there is hope that the river may erode a passage soon enough to avoid catastrophe.

The after-dark mishap occurred seven miles northwest of Gimli on Highway 8. Only the truck driver, William Reimer, 19, of Riverton, Man., survived the crash.

The dead include Joseph Patrick Rousseau, 17, of Gimli and Elvin Deboer, 16, of Beauséjour, Man., two hitchhikers picked up prior to the crash. Also killed were the driver, Harley Gillis, 18, of Winnipeg and two girls from Riverton, Man., Frances Ann Sutyia, 17, and June Triska, 18.

One of the girls—believed to be cousins—was alive after the crash but died on the way to hospital. The other four died at the scene, their bodies jammed into the wreckage of the 15-year-old car.

Reimer was on his way to his home in Riverton with a load of feed grain picked up in Winnipeg when the collision occurred on a lonely stretch of road.

The car, with the two girls in the front seat with Gillis, was driving south to Winnipeg and police said the collision occurred in the truck's lane.

Riots Flare in South Viet Nam

SAIGON (UPI) — Amid fears of more religious violence, the ruling military council sought for the third straight day Wednesday to choose a new chief of state for South Viet Nam.

A deepening power struggle was apparent among the nation's leaders. President Nguyen Khanh stepped down Tuesday on the sixth day of violent student and Buddhist protests against his authoritarian one-man rule.

RELIGIOUS RIOTS New religious riots were feared. Vietnamese rioters broke into an American-staffed civil hospital in Da-Nang Tuesday, dragged four patients from their beds, and beat them to death in the street.

An American doctor said he had heard a "firm" report that a Roman Catholic priest had been beaten to death by another gang.

The mob roamed the coastal city in gangs of up to 500. They burned several houses, including the residence of the local director of Air Viet Nam, the national airline.

The majority of the casualties at Da-Nang appeared to be among the ranks of Catholics. But a number of Buddhist rioters were killed in attacks against the heavily-armed strategic Roman Catholic hamlet of Thanh Boh, which was burned last night.

Only 50 of the hamlet's 500 houses were standing today. Both of the village churches were razed and the entire population of 1,000 refugees from North Viet Nam had disappeared.

Republicanism Creeping In

OTTAWA (UPI)—New Brunswick Conservative Tom Bell said Wednesday "creeping republicanism" dating from the Mackenzie King era had produced pressure to remove references to the British connection—and for a new Canadian flag.

Bell (Saint John-Albert) said that "in order to obtain Canadian unity we must accept French Canada as the basic, positive form of Canadianism and English-speaking Canadians must work to become identified with this type of true Canada."

"In other words, it seems to have become an established fact that no Canadian virtues are to be found in our Anglo-Saxon traditions."

Mr. Bell blamed the Ottawa "establishment" for causing the disunity that has crept into the country.

He said they and other members of the "hierarchy" have accepted the late Prime Minister King's philosophy "that played with the constitution and turned our national life into the volcano of power politics to sustain at all costs the life of the Liberal Party."

Tighter Regulations Demanded In Wake of Windfall Uproar

TORONTO (CP) — Sharp demands for tighter government regulations echoed Wednesday in the wake of the suspension of John H. Campbell, administration director of the Ontario Securities Commission, for possible involvement in the trading of shares of a mining company under OSC scrutiny.

Members of the legislature called for more stringent regulations to protect the investing public and for efforts to prevent conflicts of interest.

Mr. Campbell, 50, was suspended indefinitely Tuesday by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart, who said Mr. Campbell might have been involved directly or indirectly in trading of shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Limited.

A spectacular and unexplained rise in the price of Windfall shares and their equally shocking collapse has touched off a continuing barrage of criticism.

Three investigations, including a one-man royal commission appointed by Premier Robarts of Ontario have begun.

One of these appointed by the attorney-general July 28, led to Mr. Campbell's suspension.

Mr. Campbell, a lawyer appointed to the commission last year, said Wednesday he has done nothing "illegal, immoral or unethical," and added he is sure the continuing investigation will result in the suspension being lifted.

He said in an interview the suspension resulted from evidence he himself brought to the attention of the OSC investigators and "I was in Mr. Wishart's shoes. I would do the same thing."

He did not amplify his statement, but he did say his information was related to Windfall.

U.S. Utility Group Sells Power Bonds

SEATTLE (AP)—Bonds totaling $314,000,000 were sold Wednesday by a U.S. utility group to purchase Canada's share of Columbia River power.

A syndicate including more than 400 bond houses bought the issue at an average effective interest rate of slightly under 3.86 per cent.

The Columbia Storage Power Exchange, composed of public and private U.S. utilities, signed contracts earlier this month promising to buy Canadian power until the year 2003.

The compact binds the utilities to purchase additional power produced at U.S. dams through construction of three storage dams in Canada.

In return for the power,

CSPE proceeds from the bond sale to finance dam construction in Canada.

The syndicate which purchased the bonds through negotiation was headed by Blyth and Co., Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith, and John Nuveen and Co. The exact average annual net interest rate was given as 3.8511 per cent.

Extortion Trial Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Albert Edward Charles Hartley of suburban Surrey was committed Wednesday for trial on a charge of attempted extortion.

Hartley is charged with attempting to extort $10,000 from William Scott Randall, member of a family long associated with horse racing.

Magistrate Gordon Scott heard testimony that Randall received a letter that said:

"During 1962-63 my brother lost $10,000 in Exhibition Park at your race track. He committed suicide last November and left a wife and four children destitute. They are now on welfare. You are going to give me $10,000 to give them but I will put a bullet in your head..."

An Image Dimmed

UNTIL now it has been taken for granted that the Queen could travel her Canadian realm as free from the risk of personal harm as she can her British realm. That is, in perfect safety.

Unlike the heads of many other states the sovereign has had no need to fear either affront or danger to her person, particularly so in the older communities of the Commonwealth. Only minimum security measures were necessary to ensure her peaceful passage among her subjects.

Unfortunately for Canada the picture has changed. Her forthcoming visit to Quebec City will see her enclosed by a virtual army of police, soldiers, sailors, special officers, gathered from all over the country. This democratic land where it has been a matter of pride that high-level visitors of all kinds could traverse its domain without thought of danger now has its image dimmed.

And because of dissidents in the province of Quebec who have made open threats against the life of Her Majesty.

The precautions being taken to safeguard the Queen are prudent and wise; nothing less could be evoked in view of the statements of extreme nationalist Quebecois groups and it will be a sorry day for the hopes of French-speaking Canada if these should fail of their purpose.

But the people of Britain will read of the extraordinary steps being taken to protect the Queen with dismay compounded with amazement. Canada has always loomed to them as free and safe as is their own land where the sovereign is concerned. It will be an abrupt and unwelcome reversal for them to think that this is no longer so.

And the change is not one that Canada can view without embarrassment and exceeding disquiet.

Right to Choose

FROM PRELIMINARY appearances, local communities of this province through their delegations, to the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities will return in considerable strength this year to the quest for the right to decide whether or not their Sundays shall be "open" in the sense of permitting commercial sports and entertainment. This time, presuming resolutions seeking the option will secure a large measure of support from the municipal representatives again, it must increasingly be felt that the provincial government is exhibiting a strange variety of superior wisdom if it continues to present a stone ear to their pleas.

To say this is not to advocate open Sundays and the further erosion of the day of rest into just another day of the busy week. We would expect that Victoria and its adjoining districts, and many another centre of population in the province too would show preference by majority rule for keeping Sundays as they are.

But it is a particularly invidious distinction that Vancouver, by reason of having a civic charter, has been able to make the decision in favor of allowing paid-admission events and entertainments on Sundays while its immediate municipal neighbors cannot, under the Municipal Act by which they are governed, exercise the same choice.

This circumstance is reflected no doubt in the fact that three of the resolutions on the subject for the UBCM convention are from Burnaby, New Westminster and North Vancouver. But there has been and is pressure too from northern municipalities which in some cases perhaps have fewer amenities for non-commercial enjoyment of a Sunday afternoon and evening than do, for example, Victoria and its environs.

And if in these towns the greater number of the local population want to be able to go to a movie or to bowl, for instance, on Sunday, it is surely a denial of the democratic process on the community level that the British Columbia government withholds the right to choose.

Military Color

ALL the world over crack regimental squads strut their stuff in off-beat duties before admiring eyes. (Page our local Retreat ceremonies at the Causeway, for instance.) This is part of the panoply of military elan and plays no small part in reflecting the quality of national forces, as well as serving the civic senses.

Having been accorded regimental precedence the Canadian Guards has as one of its "show" pieces the changing of the guard ceremony that highlights Parliament Hill, a popular tourist attraction as well as a filip to regimental endeavor. And word from Ottawa suggests that Mr. Hellyer would like to drop this ceremonial, all in the name of economic pedantics.

The Guards battalion which provides this eye-filling spectacle has other strings to its bow; it keeps its sister unit up to combat strength and it supplies instructional teams for army schools and other appropriate army tasks. But the defence minister apparently takes a dim view of guardsmen showing off their paces for public benefit.

Actually public ceremonies put spirit and pride into a unit, and the tip-top form these generate are germane to the military art and efficient performance. Most countries think them valuable in this respect as well as letting the taxpayers enjoy something their taxes sustain.

But seemingly Mr. Hellyer has a mundane mind when it comes to military color and display. He has already robbed the Canadian public of the RCAF's Golden Hawks, who scintillated in aerial displays that thrilled onlookers and added to the lustre of the air force.

It is reported the defence minister doesn't quite know how he is to abolish the Guards ceremonial on Parliament Hill. We hope he never finds out. He might come round to banning the navy from enlivening our own civic scene with its spectacular show pieces.

Drabness may save a few dollars and cents but it's a poor way to run the armed services. These need a touch of pageantry for their own and the country's sakes.

Thinking Aloud

... of whom, and ships, and sailing was

By TOM TAYLOR

I HAD occasion to call on a gentleman at his home early one morning recently and there, flying proudly from his flagstaff, was the Union Jack. What else, for him, could it be? But my call had nothing to do with the matter now of national moment and the disturber of the parliamentary scene. I had no need to probe my friend's sentiments on the subject in any case. These were self-evident.

What his Jack did do was to orient my thoughts on the aesthetic quality of this historic emblem. According to my bent, naturally. Everyone has his own aesthetics.

Indeed Mr. Pearson's flag has been under fire not a little on this score, its design having violated the cultural sensibilities of many who found apt analogies to describe it. A washrag, for instance, among other things.

I doubt this is a good basic objection to the maple leaf flag. I have seen washcloths of quite superior delineation as a matter of fact, and it buries the issue, which is fundamentally a question of doing away with another design of long service and connotation.

The aesthetics are really beside the point, despite the profligate attempts to link the new flag with heraldic form and style and all the rest. All flags come in time to be glossed by familiarity so that their designs appear as of pleasant aspect.

Just for the fun of it I have been looking at a page of national flags, in color, to judge the appeal of their pictorial qualities. They do not suggest any obsession with superlative creation. Most of them could have been designed by the man in the street, that individual so often despised as bereft of artistic taste.

As a work of art the Union Jack itself is no masterpiece of aesthetic splendor, and it wasn't meant to be. It was simply the prosaic joining of three national emblems so that each could have a share of a union flag. And their derivations were religious in character—the crosses of three saints.

In the early days of banners and flags, in fact, it was the religious influence that was the arbiter of design and thus the core of a flag's pull on the loyalties of those who revered it. In other words, what it stood for. This and not aesthetics is the core of Canada's present flag issue and the reason for the disquiet of those who would retain the Red Ensign. The latter has attached associations which combine to make for them an emblem of beauty and fond memory.

Now it took 100 years for the Union Jack to be universally accepted in the land of its birth, and presumably a new Canadian flag, no matter its design, one maple leaf or three, or something else again, would gradually seem to be the acme of tasteful appeal.

Design of itself is not the criterion. It is not art but sentiment that enshrines a flag.

Certainly I must conclude so from the page spread before me. None of the national flags I see would appear to have caused too much racking of the artistic brain, or put their designers in a flurry of creative draughtsmanish.

For the most part they are like modern architectural ploys, tied to a similar pattern. With arithmetic as the divider of the cloth space available.

France, Greece, Spain, Poland, Italy, the United States, Peru, Ireland, Belgium, Estonia, et al—they have one thing in common. Either stripes or stars and occasionally both, and with but the odd, small, national symbol of other nature as an embellishment. Only a few countries eschew a simple stripe division and favor something different. How these flags evaluated I don't know but obviously there was a deal of copying at work and an easy way out followed by their designers. They did not beat their brains to a frazzle over beautiful arrangements.

Aesthetics were not the dominating aim, as they are not the crux of the Canadian flag problem.

India's Food Crisis

A Crucial Challenge

By ASHWINI KUMARI from Bombay

THE food crisis in India is the most serious since the great Bengal famine of 1943 in which a million people died. It confronts the Shastris regime with a crucial challenge: how far Nehru's successors should go in curbing the power of the country's most affluent fringe.

One of the few remarkable statements attributed to Mrs. Indira Gandhi, daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru and India's new minister of information, is that "the only effective antidote to Communism in India is an increasing dose of democratic socialism." When one talks of socialism in India what is generally meant is a condition under which public welfare is promoted by a larger measure of state control within the framework of the parliamentary system of government. Nehru defined Indian socialism as "a peaceful co-existence of the public and private sectors guided by the principles of humanism and Gandhism."

One major reason for the current wave of anti-government demonstrations in India is the dissatisfaction with the ruling Congress Party for its failure to implement even its rather anemic brand of socialism.

Food Minister Subramanyam's statement that there is no real food shortage and that the crisis is due to hoarding and black-marketing is regarded as an admission that the existing official machinery is totally inadequate to ensure the fair distribution of food grains.

Government leaders including Mr. Shastris and Mr. Nanda, the home minister, have been serving repeated notices on the wealthy farmers and food traders to disgorge their stocks. But if these have not dismayed the anti-social elements it is because of their assumption that constituted as it is, the ruling party simply does not have the courage to displease them.

Perhaps nothing is going to inhibit Mr. Shastris in his efforts to tackle the food crisis more than the manner in which he succeeded Nehru. In an attempt to make the succession as smooth and painless as possible, he took into his cabinet some discordant elements.

A small but powerful group in the Shastris cabinet is against food controls. It is led by Railway Minister S. K. Patil, who is an outspoken right-wing politician. His notions of what free enterprise should be could embarrass some U.S. Republicans.

As against the Patil group, most of Shastris's colleagues seem to be convinced that the only way to solve the food crisis is to place the entire country under a strict system of rationing and procurement of food grains. They would also like Parliament to pass stringent laws for punishing hoarders and adulterers. Mr. Nanda has demanded the death penalty.

But the farm lobby within the Congress Party is also quite powerful. Many leading party men are wealthy farmers. Since they are also key men in rural politics—many of them are chairmen of the panchayats or village councils—the Congress cannot afford to risk their disfavor.

This inner conflict in the Indian government was eloquently reflected in President Radhakrishnan's Aug. 15 Independence Day broadcast. In a speech which has dismayed many congressmen, the philosopher-statesman deplored "personal rivalries" and "group factions" and asked the government to deal sternly with hoarders, profiteers, blackmarketers and speculators "however well-placed, important and influential they are."

Observers regard Dr. Radhakrishnan's words as more than a gentle hint to Mr. Shastris that he cannot hope to solve the hunger problem with the present administrative weapons and that the ruling party has to make up its mind while there is still time.

Even making allowances for the Opposition's exaggerations, economic discontent in India seems to have reached disquieting proportions. For instance, Independence Day saw more "anti-price-increase" rallies than freedom celebrations. In some places, even congressmen joined the rallies. One member of the Shastris government has spoken of "food riots imperilling India's democratic structure."

The Communists have exploited the food situation. Top Communist leaders like Dange, Gopalan and Nambudripad are not favorites in urban industrial areas. Dange has threatened to organize within a month a national general strike, that would shut down the railways and the entire government machinery.

According to an order issued by Dange, every Communist worker in the country should enroll at least 10 passive resisters for the show-down with the government. "I am in a position even now to send a million people into jail," he boasted.

Non-Communist trade union leaders say they are conscious of the danger of massive infiltration into working class and peasant organizations. One prominent trade unionist of Bombay said: "It would be a great mistake to think that the huge rallies which the Reds have organized in the past few weeks reflect ideological support for Communism. Far from it. Hungry people do not care for political affiliations. What they want is a forum to voice their feelings."

He went on to point out that the food crisis presented Mr. Shastris with a great opportunity to demonstrate that ideology or no ideology, his government is not on the side of the economic vested interests. But another factor inhibiting Mr. Shastris in his sensitiveness to Western opinion. He does not want to create the impression that he is using the food crisis to intensify state controls.

American diplomats in New Delhi have dropped hints that Washington, as the massive donor of wheat and rice, will not take kindly to food controls. Embarrassment has been caused in Indian official circles by U.S. Ambassador Chester Bowles' advice to India not to look to "Marxist methods" to solve its food problem and take note of the failure of collectivization in Russia, China and Cuba.

Mr. Shastris's choice of economic weaponry may be determined by his almost daily confrontation with flag-waving, slogan-shouting demonstrators who crowd around his house. Like the prime minister, the demonstrators are also torn by a cruel dilemma. They are bitter and hungry but no one is willing to shout anti-Shastris slogans. Mr. Shastris may decide to keep this goodwill.

International Commentary

Echoing Mussolini

By GUY WINT

PRESIDENT Sukarno has delivered a violent speech which is meant to explain the Indonesian confrontation of Malaysia. It has been widely circulated and is given the title "A year of dangerous living." Certainly it must cause consternation among all states which have relations with Indonesia.

It is a mixture of gloating over past successes of Indonesian nationalism and a sketch of the position which he hopes Indonesia will occupy in the world. He bases this on the glitter of Indonesian arms.

"Our navy is glorious and strong," he says, "our air force is unmatched throughout south-east Asia. Our police is up-to-date. We have missiles and rockets. Moreover we are now able to manufacture our own jet engines."

It is significant that he does not link his dreams of Indonesia's greatness with the economic or social development of the country. He prefers to rely on the sheer expansionism of Indonesian nationalism, on the dynamic quality of the Indonesian revolution.

President Sukarno is one who misconceives the great tradition of revolution. He would like to stand in the shoes of Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru, Jinnah, Sun Yat-sen and the other great embodiments of national revolution. But he fails to take note of their positive achievements.

Every great revolutionary leader has a positive role as well as a destructive one. Revolution means that he destroys much of the past which has become obsolete. But he also builds up a community which is new and which satisfies the rising generation. This is what President Sukarno has strikingly failed to do.

In the same week as President Sukarno's speech there appeared in the London Times a dispassionate but sombre article on the worsening economic crisis in Indonesia. First and foremost, Indonesia is on the threshold of a population explosion.

This is not the fault of the government. But the government has done nothing to protect the country against its consequences.

To provide for the annual increase of the population and to maintain the standard of living it is estimated that there should be an annual investment of over $1,500 million. The government is aware of this and it might be expected to bestir itself to make an economic plan as sober and realistic as India's.

The countries which are the chief sources of economic aid have no intention of using economic power to influence

Indonesia's policy. But is there sense in President Sukarno forecasting at such a time the confiscation without compensation of large amounts of foreign capital invested in the oil industry?

Is it wise for him to speak with empty bravado, "So to hell with your tales of Indonesian economic destruction. Indonesia will never collapse?" Revolution in adversity is admirable. A frivolous closing of the eye to reality is quite another matter.

President Sukarno accompanied his speech by a stepping-up of the campaign against Malaysia. He has landed small, but heavily armed, invasion squads on the mainland of Malaya. These include members of the regular Indonesian armed forces.

The Malaysian government has taken this with commendable calm. But yet it does not minimize its seriousness. It has informed the United Nations Security Council. It is taking precautionary measures including mobilization of part of the territorial army.

Surely President Sukarno recognizes that such an obviously aggressive move cannot but have very dangerous consequences. To send units, however small, to maraud in the territory of a neighbor is an outrage. It is a long step towards actual war.

All the states which make up the family of nations in South-east Asia will take stock of the situation. Both the words and the actions of President Sukarno are aggressive beyond belief. In his speech he does not bother to put forward any specious reasons to make the worst appear the better cause. In a world grown sick of imperialism, his proclamation of Indonesian imperialism ambition must strike other countries as wearisomely predatory.

All he says is that Indonesia desires certain territory which it has never occupied and to which it has no shadow of a claim. He justifies this by appealing to the revolution and saying that the Indonesians are a revolutionary people. They have the arms, and they will take whatever they please, regardless of international law.

Not for nothing does his speech end in familiar phrases. "The revolution will crush all difficulties," "ever onward," "no retreat," "live dangerously."

Who does this echo? Surely it is Benito Mussolini, the inventor of Fascism. It was Fascism which brought about the downfall of Italy, and fatally clouded the memory of its glorious revolution of the mid-nineteenth century.

Ludicrous Argument

Floundering Around

By CASSANDRA from London

WHAT a genius the Rt. Hon. Henry Brooke has for getting into every blundering mess and muddle that the mind can conceive. From deportations to jailbreaks, from insane policemen to escaping financiers, this hunching, floundering Home Secretary can be relied on to put his foot in it.

He has dropped enough bricks to build a housing estate. Now he has fallen through the drum of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

With a great crash and amid the sound of cymbals sent flying, Henry is up to the ears in a ludicrous argument as to whether the orchestra shall be allowed to keep the prefix "Royal" after their breakaway from the Royal Philharmonic Society.

Said one of Mr. Brooke's official spokesmen, pompously: "It is a matter of protocol." Then he added, sadly, "I don't think the Home Secretary would have any legal power if anyone used the word 'Royal' without permission and against his advice."

"Royal" means "kingly" or "regal" and the number of people who can use the word in the context "By Royal Appointment," concerning the most mundane things, is surprising.

Sausages are supplied to Buckingham Palace "By Royal Appointment." The test, presumably, is whether the bangers have a regal or kingly mien. There are "By Royal Appointment" kingly baked beans, kingly fillets of frozen fish, kingly tallow candles, kingly soups, kingly Scotch whiskies, kingly lawn mowers, kingly dry cleaners, kingly tie-makers, kingly wallpaper manufacturers, and kingly launderers.

Now, stumbling around in all these monarchical groceries, supplied (no, the word used is purveyed) by a grateful nation of shopkeepers, is Mr. Brooke. Come to think of it, the Home Secretary may not be so much out of place jostling along regal pots of marmalade, cordwain, and Royal and Sovereign tins of boot polish.

After all, in his capacity as one of Her Majesty's Ministers of the Crown, he too can claim to be "By Royal Appointment" along with those Imperial fillets of frozen fish.

The gleeful word-torturers of the advertising world have got new victims and they are breaking them on the Wheel and stretching them on the Procrustean Bed.

Listen to this sentence undergoing the treatment. It is trying to sell a razor blade, and as the agony increases it screams: "THE BLADE THAT FEELS UNBREAKABLE TO THE SKIN."

Why not continue? "The blade that is silent to the tongue, intangible to the ear and tasteless to the eye."

It is a brave new world that includes invisible food that you can taste with your ear and chew with your eye.

When Rolls-Royce and the British Motor Corporation go walking hand in hand down the garden path—I mean riding the motorways together—it is news.

I wonder what old Henry Brooke and the Honorable C. S. Rolls and William Morris would have thought of this liaison. But it has occurred and the BMC Princess now has a Rolls-Royce four-litre, six-cylinder engine under its graceful bonnet.

Senior students of the Rolls—I am one—will note with interest tinged with amusement that Rolls have made a major concession with the new engine.

For decades they have kept the developed brake horsepower of their engines a closely guarded secret and to purchasers who have asked what the BHP figure is they have replied coldly: "Sufficient."

Now they frankly announce that the rating for the new F.B.60 engine in the new Princess is 175 BHP.

I am sure it will be—"sufficient."

Take your choice: "Best music which seems very little removed from the rhythm of native dances, is largely responsible for the madness affecting many youngsters who, without it, would be perfectly normal people."—The Rev. Cecil Burnham, of All Saints, Hastings.

"A jazz version of the hymn, 'Onward, Christian Soldiers,' will be played at a white wedding in a 500-year-old church at Groton, Suffolk, on September 12. Swinging Bishop of Colchester, the Rt. Rev. Frederick Narborough will read the prayers and give the blessing."

"Barry took the wrong copy. The one he has is the explanation of the speech he's going to make."

More Rest
For Ycaza

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y.

(AP)—Jockey Manuel Ycaza was handed a 20-day suspension by the Saratoga stewards Tuesday as a penalty for his ride on Stephen Foster in the sixth race Monday.

Stephen Foster finished first but was disqualified and placed second behind Weatherbeaten. Ycaza's suspension runs from Aug. 27 through Sept. 15 inclusive.

Ycaza, who has a long record of suspensions, has twice before been set down by the stewards this year in New York. Since 1954, Ycaza has been suspended a total of 518 days.

For Britain
At Olympics

LONDON (AP)—Britain named 38 men and 17 women last week for the track events in the Tokyo Olympic Games but left European 5,000-meter champion Bruce Tulloh on the sidelines.

Tulloch, a botanist who runs barefooted, must wait another month to see if he makes the team.

Jack Crump, secretary of the British Athletic Board, said Tulloh's running in August did not justify his selection. Tulloh failed to finish twice in three days following an attack of measles. Doctors say he will regain his form after a rest.

Places also were left for other competitors who can prove they are worth the trip to Tokyo.

Lyn Davies of Wales was Britain's only nomination for the 100 meters and Menzies Campbell of Scotland was named for the 200 meters. No sprint relay squad was named.

Bill Wakeham Now Golf Pro

Bill Wakeham, 24, loves golf so much he has given up his amateur status to continue playing in tournaments as a professional.

The young Victoria golfer, who has earned places on Canadian international teams, announced his decision to turn professional Wednesday when he told Trail Open officials that he intended to play for the cash prizes in this week-end's tournament.

Last year, as winner of the Trail Open, Wakeham was given a $100 sports coat. The second-place finisher, a professional, pocketed $350 cash.

"I can no longer afford to be an amateur," said Wakeham. "I want to make a living out of golf."

Wakeham, who won the Canadian junior title at 17, has found that there are few "angels" in amateur golf in this evergreen corner of Canada.

Amateur golf is like no other amateur sport in Canada," said Wakeham last night. "Few, if any good amateurs have sponsors or get expensive money like other athletes."

The Gorge Vale golfer, recently married, has taken a job as a manufacturer's representative and must necessarily cut down on long out-of-city trips. However, he will be able to take part in weekend events as a professional and feels confident that he can at least make expenses.

Wakeham won the Canadian junior title in 1957; twice won the B.C. Amateur, was Island Open winner twice; was medalist in the 1961 Canadian Amateur as a member of B.C.'s Willingdon Cup team and has also played on Canada's Commonwealth, World and America's Cup teams in Australia and Japan.

He intends to apply for membership in the Canadian Professional Golfers Association. He must play a probationary period of a year before taking prizes in CPGA-sponsored events but can do so in lesser, non-sponsored events such as the Trail Open.

Wakeham recently was forced into a tickle spot in the B.C. Open. He scored a hole-in-one and was offered a $1,500 bonus as a reward. However, he turned it down on the grounds that accepting would jeopardize his amateur status.

NOTHING YET

Amateurs can accept prizes of no more than $200 in value. He asked for scrip of that figure in lieu of the prize but so far has not received it from the tournament promoters.

Since making his decision this week, Wakeham has put in a claim for the boat.

Views of Sport

By Red Smith

The top bananas at Columbia Broadcasting System were startled and deeply saddened by the adverse public reaction to the purchase of the Yankees by CBS. Living as they do in a dream world populated by lawmen of granite rectitude and monkish celibacy, dedicated internes and nurses both beautiful and heroic, they had expected a reception as enthusiastic as that accorded to the romance of Empress Grace of Hollywood and Prince Charming of Monaco.

Instead, they were driven into bomb shelters, from which William S. Paley and Dr. Frank Stanton emerged warily last week "to give forthright, unconditional answers to three major questions that have arisen."

The first question (the statement continues): Does CBS's acquisition of the Yankees change baseball from a sport to a business?

The answer: Of course not. League baseball has always been a sport and a business. It is a business because any professional sport in a society that does not subsidize it must make its own financial way. This does not detract from its genuineness as a sport any more than a newspaper is less a newspaper because it is a business.

Fans who have seen the carpetbaggers at work in baseball in the last decade are fully aware of where sport leaves off and business begins. They do not need Mr. Paley or Dr. Stanton to explain it to them.

Neither are they impressed by that gratuitous analogy with the newspaper business, which has never pretended to be anything but a business. The CBS brass has been fooling with the dials again, watching actors with press cards in their hats refer to it as the "newspaper game."

The second question: Does CBS's acquisition of the Yankees raise anti-trust problems or give CBS a privileged position in negotiating for broadcasting rights?

The answer: No, on both counts. The best legal advice CBS could get assured us that no conflict with anti-trust laws is involved. In negotiating, through the office of the commissioner, for broadcasting such events as the world series, CBS would have to bid in equal competition with all other networks. There is no conceivable way through which CBS could gain preferential treatment.

The anti-trust matter is one for the courts and, possibly, the Congress. As to preferential treatment, on any proposition requiring a majority vote of clubowners, CBS would go in with one vote out of 20, a small edge but an exclusive one. On any matter involving only the Yankees, CBS would have one vote out of one.

Organized baseball, the statement declares, "is not going to show favoritism to one network over others just because it owns a club—or for any other reason." In the beautiful world of TV, apparently, professional baseball people are made of finer clay than professional football people.

Have the Messrs. Paley and Stanton forgotten so soon that after their network underwrote the National Football League for $25 million, Pete Rozelle did give CBS preferential treatment by awarding it the championship playoff without competitive bidding?

The third question: Will CBS's ownership of the Yankees make the club an even more powerful competitor than it has been in the past?

The answer: No, the Yankees can hardly be much more powerful competitors than they have been in the past 10 years.

That haunting mood music from the pit is a new composition, "Dirge for Two Harmonicas," by Lawrence Peter Berra and Philip Francis Lutz.

Evidently Dr. Stanton and Mr. Paley had public opinion on the transaction sampled by the same pollsters who measure the cultural appeal of Johnny Carson, for they were able to count only three "major questions."

No doubt the acoustics of the bomb shelter were responsible for their inability to hear anybody asking: "Why was this deal railroaded through in the first place?"

Perhaps we shall be favored with still another set of forthright, unconditional answers on this question.

Workers Win Series Opener

Greaves Movers limited Transport Workers to five hits but it wasn't enough to stop the first-place Transport Workers as they took a 4-1 victory in the first game of the best-of-three Senior Amateur baseball Round Cup championship last night, in Royal Athletic Park.

Workers grabbed an early lead in the first inning when John Yankowski got a single, Les Brice sacrificed and a drive by Gary Bishop was bobbled at second to bring Yankowski home.

Harvey Harvey scored the second run when he hit a single, was sacrificed to second and came home on an error.

Greaves moved to one run behind in the third inning when Ron Stubbings got a single, stole second and came home on a hit by Larry Montgomery.

Workers made the score 3-1 in the fourth inning when Bud Taylor, Yankowski and Harvey loaded the bases and Les Brice grounded out to bring Taylor home.

With Yankowski and Harvey still on bases Art Worth went to first on a base-on-balls and Gary Bishop was hit by a pitched ball to bring Yankowski home for the final Worker run.

These clubs face each other again tonight in Royal Athletic Park at 7 p.m. for the second game of the championship.

Burnaby Rifle Man Almost Makes Sweep

Graham Thorkelson of the Burnaby Rifle Club won all but one of the individual trophies offered by the Vancouver Island Centre fire championships at the recent first annual shoot at Esquimalt Lagoon.

Thorkelson finished with the three highest scores recorded during the day. Victoria's Eric Foulmer was second with a high gun-shoot tally of 285.

Foulmer with team mates G.H. Carmichael, Gerry Williams and Colin Wyatt won the team competition for Victoria with Nanaimo running second, four points back.

Orioles' Perch Crowded White Sox Right There

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago White Sox pushed across a run in the 12th inning on an error by Rich Rollins, a passed ball and Don Buford's single to defeat Minnesota Twins 2-1 Wednesday night and climb within one percentage point of the American League lead.

The victory left the White Sox trailing first-place Baltimore 60.5 to .605. The Orioles lost to Cleveland 3-2.

Ed Fisher got the victory with three innings of hitless relief pitching.

Johnny Romano's bunt single drove in the tie-breaking run in a two-run eighth-inning rally that gave the Indians the victory over Baltimore.

The loss was the third straight for the league leaders.

The squeeze bunt by Indian slugging Romano scored Chico Salmon and broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth. Vic Davalillo followed with a run-scoring double to give Cleveland a 3-1 edge.

Los Angeles Angels tagged John O'Donoghue for three runs and six hits in four innings en route to a 5-2 victory over Kansas City Athletics.

The National League-leading Philadelphia Phillies backed Chris Short's tight pitching with a barrage of four home runs and salvaged the final game of a three-game series with Milwaukee Braves, 6-1.

Gus Triandos hit two homers and Ruben Amaro and Tony Gonzalez one each as Short registered his 14th victory against six losses.

Home runs by Ernie Banks and Ron Santo helped Larry Jackson to his 10th victory as Chicago Cubs stopped Houston's six-game winning streak with a 3-1 win.

The loss prevented the Cubs from becoming the first team in the National League to win seven consecutive games this season.

Rookie Mike Cuellar pitched his first complete game in the majors as St. Louis Cardinals completed a sweep of a three-game series from Pittsburgh Pirates with a 4-2 victory.

A double by Mike Brumley and a single by Don Zimmer, together with a rare misplay by catcher Elston Howard, paved the way for both Washington runs. They led to Naram's ninth victory against 10 defeats, and only his second win since June 21.

Dave Wickensham posted his 16th victory and Don Demeter and Jerry Lumpe hit homers to lead Detroit Tigers to a 4-1 victory over Boston Red Sox.

Three Gridders Fined

WINNIPEG (CP)—Football Commissioner G. Sydney Halter has fined three Western Conference players.

Dick Fouts of British Columbia Lions was fined $150 for conduct resulting in a match penalty in a game at Vancouver, Aug. 19. Ed Buchanan of Saskatchewan Roughriders received a $50 fine on the same charge for an incident in the same game.

Halter also said Al Eruyer of Edmonton Eskimos has been fined $50 for conduct resulting in a match penalty in a game at Calgary, Aug. 17.

Japanese Softball Disaster for Umps

Softball, as played in Japan, arrived at Esquimalt yesterday with disastrous results for three umpires.

The Japanese sailors played three games against teams of Canadian sailors from HMCS Stettler, HMCS Qu'Appelle and HMCS Fraser, at Naden field last night and succeeded in winning two of the games. But they captured all of the spectators by their enthusiastic antics.

Whenever any member of either team made a catch, whether good or bad the results were inevitably cheers and hand-clapping from the Japanese cheering section.

But the plate umpire. That was a different matter. Whatever he did, could never please the Japanese visitors.

Whenever the opposing team was at bat, whatever the call, ball or strike, brought loud boos, hisses and the only English word completely mastered by the Japanese visitors. "Robber!"

At one game when the catcalls got particularly brisk the umpire resorted to grinning at the Japanese whenever he called one of their batters out.

This however brought no relief for the now red-faced ump. More cries of "Robber!" arose when he grinned and he was forced to suffer the remaining innings in quiet indignation.

The colorful history of holing-in-one—still the most thrilling achievement in golf—continues to be enriched almost daily.

In the space of three days in America last month an "ace" was achieved by a nine-year-old tyro named Vince Oliveri and an 81-year-old veteran called Tom Spence.

Astonishing? No, almost commonplace. I began collecting curious holing-in-one feats quite a few years ago, but what were considered sensations even 10 years ago have almost become matter-of-fact achievements.

Take the case of two players holing the same hole in one while playing together. The mathematical odds against it, of course, are simply astronomical. But now even my haphazard records reveal that it's been recorded more than a dozen times.

The very simple explanation is that there are now three or four times as many golfers across the world than there were a decade ago. It is one of the greatest tributes to the game's popularity.

So many aces are being recorded that I am now confining myself to the real off-beat incidents. The best of the season was told me last week.

It concerns the near tragedy-comedy that crept up on club-player Bill Cary while playing an evening round at a course on the outskirts of London.

Disappears in Dark

Bill hit his tee shot towards the short seventh green but lost sight of the ball in the gloaming. Bill's opponent, one Edgar Winter, then hit a beauty. It ran up the green and finished dead on the lip of the hole.

It was getting late, so after a few minutes they called off the search for Bill's ball. Bill gradually conceded the hole and went to collect his partner's ball from the foot of the pin. You've guessed it, of course. Bill's ball was lying in the cup. The first "ace" of his life... but he had already lost the hole!

Even this, though, does not match the prize hole-in-one incident in my entire collection.

It occurred some years ago. Two low-handicap players each risked driving across a tall thicket—the direct but "blind" route to the pin at a short dog-leg hole.

Both of them hit beautiful shots. They then walked round the dog-leg to discover one ball about six inches from the hole. They searched for the other one in vain—until they looked in the hole and there it was.

They flashed it out. Player No. 1 exclaimed: "It's mine!" "I beg your pardon," said Player No. 2. "It's mine!"

It was only then they discovered they had both hit Dunlop 65 "6's". There were no other markings to indicate whose ball was which.

To this day, therefore, neither man knows who actually achieved that hole in one.

I've known some frustrating experiences in nearly 40 years in golf but I certainly can't match that!

Islanders On Board For Fishing

Six Vancouver Islanders have been named to the newly-organized government-sportsman advisory committee on salt water fishing for British Columbia, which met recently in Vancouver.

Named to the committee were: Howard English and Bob Wright of Victoria; Jim Gilbert of Brentwood Bay; Van Egan, Philip Petersen and Rodrick Haig-Brown of Campbell River. The committee was formed to obtain a better understanding of the tidal sport fishery of B.C., and has representatives from various sport fishing organizations, other groups interested in the tidal sport fishery and the federal department of fisheries.

The committee will hold its first working session in November.

'B' Softball Final Set

McLaren will meet Nanaimo in the final game of the best-of-three Senior 'B' Island softball finals Sunday at 1 p.m. in Comox Park, Nanaimo.

Winner will advance to the provincial championships to be held in Port Alberni Sept. 4-7.

Sandra Kattler Wins Gold Dance

Sandra Kattler joined a relatively select club of Victorians when she won her gold dance and seventh figure awards at the conclusion of the Esquimalt summer school of figure skating recently.

Only five other Victorians hold the gold dance certificate, and Miss Kattler was the only local skater to obtain the award at this year's eight-week session.

Flying Phil in on goal

Hockey School Full Of Young Hopefuls

A 40-pound bundle of dynamite in the form of a small boy took to the ice early this week as the third annual hockey school opened at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Philip Delasalle, 865 Kindersley, not only celebrated his sixth birthday last month, but also managed to reach the three-foot, six-inch mark in height.

"This little guy is a real dynamo on the ice," said Joe Lannarelli, director of the school.

Philip is one of 72 young hockey enthusiasts between the ages of six and 18 years of age registered to undergo a week's intensive training under the guidance of the school's chief instructor Andy Heberton, the iron-man of the National Hockey League.

The boys are classed according to their ages, and each youngster receives an equal amount of ice-time instruction—approximately four hours each day. The remainder of the school day is spent in the classroom, where they view instructional films on the game and receive lectures from their instructors regarding the finer points of hockey. It is while in the classroom they are taught the rules and regulations of the game, which they put into effect during their periods on the ice.

To accommodate all the boys and still give as much individual instruction as possible the school runs for two weeks. Some of them have become so enthused they plan to stay for the second week, which will be a repeat of the first week's lessons.

On Monday the school will be visited by Terry Harper and John Ferguson, both of the Montreal Canadiens.

With Andy Heberton as their chief instructor and a full day's visit by two of the Montreal Canadiens' up and coming young players, what pin-sized hockey player could wish for more?

Palmer, Nicklaus Slumping

World Golf Anybody's Meat

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP)—Temporary slumps by Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus make a virtual free-for-all of the $200,000 World Championship Golf Tournament, starting today over the Oakland Hills course.

"I think I have found my choking price," commented blonde Bruce Crampton of Australia, scanning the impressive prize list—$35,000 for the winner, $17,000 for the runner-up, and $1,000 and over to the top 36 finishers.

NEVER RICHER There has never been a richer golf tournament. Players have stocked up on tranquilizer pills for the next four days.

Crampton is one of 66 players from 13 countries who will battle 107 leading U.S. contestants for the pile of gold.

The favorite, because he is brimming with confidence and at the peak of his game, is Ken Venturi, the U.S. open champion and comeback of the year. He won the American Golf Classic last weekend and has been the hottest player in pre-tournament practice rounds, over this 6,907-yard, par 70 layout on the outskirts of Detroit.

"Ken is really pouring those shots in there," said Palmer, the masters titleholder. "He is so sure of himself now he doesn't think he can miss a shot."

Both Palmer and Nicklaus have pulled up short in the midsummer hot weather tournaments, finishing high but failing to dominate the tour as expected.

They still lead the scoring averages—regarded as the true test of golf—with marks just under 70, but they have been unable to shake their new "bridesmaid" images.

Venturi, hitting his approach shots to the flag, has cowed this rugged, rain-softened course in practice.

THREE STARS Sharing his favorite's role with Venturi are three new stars—Tony Lemus, the British open champion, Bobby Nichols, winner of the PGA, and Puerto Rico's playful Chi Chi Rodriguez, liked because of his tremendous driving length in spite of his 120-pound frame.

"You have to be long to win here, and I'm not long enough," said Ben Hogan, who captured the third of his four U.S. opens over a tougher Oakland Hills course in 1951.

Eight Canadians entered in the tournament include Canadian amateur champ Nick Westlock of Toronto and seven pros—George Knudson, Toronto CPGA champion; Al Balding, Alvie Thompson and Moe Norman, all of Toronto; Frank Whitley, Kitchener; Wilf Hornum, Winnipeg; and Bill Wright, Edmonton.

Ontario Sweeps Bowling

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ontario Wednesday swept the Canadian lawn bowling championships.

The young team that belied the traditional concept that lawn bowling is an old man's game, won the fours, pairs and singles events in the championship.

It is the first time in the history of the national championships that one province has won all categories.

Ontario ended up with 32 points in the overall standings, with British Columbia second with 24 and Quebec third with 20.

Manitoba had 18, Saskatchewan 16, Alberta 12, and Nova Scotia, competing in its first national championship, 4.

The Ontario victory was sparked by the superb bowling of Karl Beacom of Scarborough, at 26 the youngest ever singles champion.

TIE-BREAKER

Beacom upset favored John Henderson of Montreal 21-8 in the seventh and final round then went on to beat defending champion Sandy Houston of Vancouver 16-13 in an exciting tie-breaking match.

Beacom, Henderson—who had defeated Houston in regular play earlier—and Houston ended the seventh round with identical records of five victories and one defeat.

In the tie-breaker Houston defeated Henderson 17-12 then met Beacom.

The "whizz kids" of the tournament, pairs team Ray Reidel and Joe Dorach of Waterloo, won the championship they won for the first time last year.

The Ontario fours team of Bill Cowling of Toronto, G. J. Picken, J. A. Whelan and S. E. Bond of Scarborough won 15 straight games. They won nine straight in the provincial championship and were undefeated here.

Group Tours

Tourists Coming In Bunches

Group party tours appear to be playing a more important role in Vancouver Island tourism these days, say officials.

The group tours offer package plans which take care of everything to and from the area to be visited.

FUSS AND BOTHER

And because all the fuss and bother of arranging a vacation is removed, the group tours are particularly appealing to elderly people.

Officials say individual travellers in private cars still form the bulk of Vancouver Island's tourists but group party tours are becoming more popular than ever before.

EASTERN ORIGIN

American tours usually originate from California or eastern centres such as New York or Chicago, but some tours have come from as far away as Hawaii and Florida.

And many groups stop over briefly in Victoria while heading for Alaska.

Saanich Pioneer Buried

Funeral services were held Saturday for Edward Henry Marcotte, Saanich pioneer.

Born 88 years ago at the family farm on Mount Newton Cross Road, Saanich, Mr. Marcotte owned and operated the farm which has been in his family for more than 100 years.

His mother, Rose Marcotte, started the first commercial strawberry business in Saanich.

He is survived by his widow, Lora, at Metchoan Road; four daughters, Marie Pledger, Nora Tribe, both of Victoria, Annie Hanna of Vancouver and Jean Denny of Toronto; two sons, Keith of Victoria, and Joseph of Vancouver; three grandchildren; two nieces and three nephews.

Private funeral services were held in the Thomson & Irving Funeral Chapel, followed by cremation.

NDP Planning Policy Parleys

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party will hold five or six regional policy conferences this fall before drafting its next provincial policy statement, Ernest Hall, NDP secretary, said Monday. Tentative conference sites are Vancouver, the Okanagan, Kootenays, Kamloops, Prince George or Prince Rupert and on Vancouver Island.

Mini-Metro Talks

Campbell Lifts Ban on Press

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Wednesday lifted the ban on press coverage of the study group dealing with a proposed Capital Region joint services board.

He told the Colonist that the next meeting of the study group, scheduled for Sept. 2, and all subsequent meetings up to the point where any future legislation might be disclosed, will be open to the press.

Holding of the initial meeting in camera last Thursday resulted in severe criticism from several quarters. The decision was made by Mr. Campbell after some discussion with representatives of local municipalities and special areas who attended the meeting.

Mr. Campbell said two main factors influenced the change in his position:

● Firstly, in an apparent reference to statements that the government was forcing amalgamation upon Greater Victoria in the guise of a joint services board, he was "concerned that some implications have been read into the plan" which simply don't exist.

● Secondly, that Opposition Leader Robert Strachan's statement that the deliberations of the study group should be public business allayed fears that the legislature might prove touchy on this score.

PROBLEM
The minister said there appeared to be a problem when the study group was established arising out of public discussion of matters which could later be presented to the legislature in the form of new legislation at the next session.

This possibility now seems to have disappeared in the wake of Mr. Strachan's remarks and the reaction of local MLAs who attended the first meeting of the study group.

Mr. Campbell warned, however, that if agreement was reached by members of the study group on a joint services board then any legislation drafted by the municipal affairs department would have to be presented in camera.

NOT IN PUBLIC

"At the meeting last Thursday I gave the members of the study group an undertaking that if they did reach agreement and instruct us to prepare legislation we would show it to them in draft form. But that certainly could not be done in public," he said.

The minister said he is still confident that the deliberations of the study group could result in lasting benefits to the entire Capital Region.

He said he could not understand why Esquimalt council last Monday decided that it wanted no further part in discussions of the need for a joint services board.

VALUABLE

The fact that Esquimalt recognizes the need for a joint sewer system, said Mr. Campbell, indicates that the discussions are valuable "even if we get to no point beyond this one vital service."

He also commented on the weekend statement by Coun. Joseph Casey of Saanich that joint services can be provided now under the existing provincial Water Act.

"The department has no objection to the use of any existing legislation," said Mr. Campbell. "But the question remains: why is this legislation not being used more fully now?"

Insurance Men Here Sunday

More than 170 U.S. life insurance salesmen and executives will arrive at the Empress Sunday for a four-day convention.

Members of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U.S. will leave Wednesday after business sessions, banquets and tours of the city.

Japanese Busy While Fleet Visits Victoria

By DON GAIN

Rear-Admiral Kazutoshi Kuhara will call on Premier Bennett and Mayor R. B. Wilson this morning. He will also attend a Government House luncheon hosted by Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes for the admiral, the skippers of his ships and members of the Japanese Defence Agency.

It will be a busy day for Japan's senior sea-going training officer who arrived Wednesday with ships of the Japanese Maritime Self-Defence Force.

The four destroyer-escorts steamed past Duntze Head just before 9 a.m. amid the echoes of 68 salvos from saluting guns aboard the flagship Teruzuki and at the navy's Black Rock battery.

Red-and-white rising-sun flags fluttered from the sterns of two U.S.-built Fletcher-class destroyers and two Japanese-built warships.

All units of the Japanese force, they range in size from 1,700 to 2,350 tons and from 357 to 387 feet long, and they all have romantic names.

Admiral Kuhara said his flagship's name Teruzuki means Shining Moon.

Through an interpreter, one of his officers, he told a press conference the meaning of the other ships' names.

Ariake means Dawn Twilight; Yugure means Evening Dusk and Makinami means Roller Wave.

The admiral read a statement in Japanese which was later read in English by his translator.

The purpose of the training squadron, he said, is to gain "deeper friendly relations between Japan and Canada," to give their sailors appropriate training and to extend their knowledge of Canada.

"I sincerely hope that this visit will contribute to furtherance of better understanding and friendly relations between our two navies and also further strengthen the important bond of friendship between Japan and Canada," he said.

Rear-Admiral W. M. Landymore, flag officer Pacific Coast, welcomed the 1,200 Japanese at HMC Dockyard. A 24-piece Japanese band played O Canada and Kimigayo (Emperor's Reign), the Japanese national anthem.

Admiral Kuhara paid calls on Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes and Reeve A. C. Wurtz of Esquimalt and laid a wreath at the Esquimalt cenotaph.

There were bus tours and ball games, dinners, teas and receptions.

Here is today's schedule:
9 a.m.—Bus tour for 300 Japanese seamen and 100 officers.

10:30 a.m.—Admiral Kuhara will call on Premier Bennett.

11 a.m.—Admiral Kuhara will call on Mayor R. B. Wilson.

12:15 p.m.—Government House luncheon.

1 p.m.—Bus tour.

6:30 p.m.—Softball or volleyball game depending on weather.

9 p.m.—National Film Board movies with Japanese sound tracks aboard Japanese ships.

Man Survives Eight-Floor Fall

By BOB PETHICK

A laborer survived a 75-foot plunge Wednesday afternoon from the eighth floor of a 12-storey high-rise being built at Dallas and South Turner.

Silvano Scattola, 35, of 2820 The Rise, lived because his fall was broken by springy steel forms piled up on the ground.

He suffered head injuries, internal injuries, and left arm and left leg fractures, and was in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital last night.

Mr. Scattola landed on reinforcing steel columns which were wired together before being hoisted to the next level of construction, the ninth floor. They acted as a sort of safety net.

He was pushed over the edge when a four by eight sheet of three-quarter-inch plywood was caught by a heavy gust of wind and slammed into him.

He had just finished pouring concrete into a form and was walking along the eighth floor with his empty wheel barrow when the wood hit him.

The plywood sheet was part of some form material. Winds were gusting up to 40 miles an hour here during the afternoon, the weather office reported.

Mr. Scattola was apparently going to wash out the wheel barrow as it was close to the day's end.

"He was a lucky man, project superintendent Dick Ekman said last night.

But Mr. Ekman said it was not unusual for work to be carried on in high winds, and the

Saanich

Council Entries Increase

Another Saanich ratepayer has joined the bid-for-council race in the October byelection.

Donald Charles Mathison, 38, 3828 Haro Road, department store salesman is the fourth contender seeking election to the seat which will be vacated by Coun. Hugh Curtis.

Coun. Curtis is seeking re-election in the election caused by the resignation of Reeve Stanley Murphy Monday night. Mr. Murphy is leaving Victoria to take up a teaching post in Southern Rhodesia.

Recent winner of the Junior Chamber of Commerce Canadian public speaking contest, Mr. Mathison was an unsuccessful council candidate in the 1962 municipal elections.

FAVORS POOL
He is a director of the Community Planning Association of Canada and president of Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association.

Mr. Mathison is in favor of a capital budget on the basis of long-term loans and would like to see the $105,000 federal centennial grant spent on the construction of a municipal swimming pool and landscape park between the new municipal hall and Swan Lake.

His opponents in the byelection will be contractor William Campbell, Lt. Cmdr. Harry Shergold, RCN, and Victoria fireman Edward Ball.

Legislative Buildings

Eye-Level History

Rubbernecking visitors will soon be able to identify the life-size statues in wall niches high up on the outside of the legislative south wing.

There are 14 statues in all, depicting illustrious figures of B.C. history and another half-dozen stone medallions bearing the faces of other great men through the ages.

It's a pretty safe bet that none of the tourists—and few of the local residents who bother to look upwards—are able to identify any of "these figures out of the past."

The department of public works is about to rectify this situation by erecting a stone-faced cairn and plaque near the fountain at the rear of the legislative buildings.

The figures are to be reproduced in miniature on the plaque which will also contain a brief description of the role each played in the discovery and foundation of B.C.

The statues depict:

Col. R. C. Moody, commander of the Royal Engineers; explorer David Thompson; Sir Anthony Musgrave, the last colonial governor; British secretary of state for the colonies Lord Lytton. Simon Fraser, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Francis Drake, Capt. James Cook, Dr. John Sebastian Helmcke, Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, Chief Magistrate, Capt. George Vancouver, and Dr. John McLoughlin, chief factor of the HBC prior to 1848.

The medallions are of Milton, Sophocles, Shakespeare, Socrates, Dante and Homer.

A spokesman for the public works department said there will likely be a small official unveiling of the plaque in about two weeks.

Man, Woman Admit Guilt

A man and woman pleaded guilty in Saanich magistrate's court Wednesday to a total of 13 charges arising from the recovery of stolen money orders and weapons and were remanded for sentence to Sept. 2.

Facing Magistrate William Oulter were June Rose Hoy, 32, and Juergen Erich Flegert, 24. Flegert was charged with breaking and entering A and B Hardware on Burnside West and with theft of money orders from the sub post office at that address.

SUBSTITUTION
Similar charges were preferred against Mrs. Hoy but these were dropped and others substituted.

She was charged with possession of a $1,000 bond, property of the Bank of Montreal, Oak Bay; possession of a $50 bond, property of Mrs. Amy Kirchin, 1159 Beach Drive, and possession of postal money orders valued at over $50, property of the post office.

In addition she admitted to eight charges of cashing forged postal orders to a total value of $113.42.

KNIFE, RIFLES
The Flegert charges involved theft of money orders from the sub post office and a hunting knife and three rifles valued at $48.50, $92.95 and $32.10 from the hardware store.

Det. Sgt. Robin Stewart said that Flegert admitted taking 182 postal orders, $134 in cash and post office equipment from the sub post office.

Police arrested Mrs. Hoy after a stakeout at the city post office. A search of her home disclosed a suitcase containing the $1,000 bond and the $50 bond, plus stamps to make up money orders. There were a number of money orders, ready to be mailed in envelopes bearing fictitious names. The orders totalled $7,165.80.

The search also produced $79,223 in forms used for certified cheques the woman had apparently acquired while working as a clerk in the Oak Bay branch of the Bank of Montreal.

LETTER FOUND
Police said possession of such cheques is not an offence unless an intention to cash them can be shown.

Flegert, from eastern Canada, was arrested last week at Hudson Hope, B.C.

Police said the search of the Hoy residence turned up a letter from Flegert mailed in Dawson Creek in which Flegert suggested Mrs. Hoy should go to Ontario "if things get hot" and that Flegert would meet her there.

Regatta Island's Largest

LAKE COWICHAN—Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Pearkes will officially open the Lake Cowichan regatta at Lakeview Park on the lakeshore in the early afternoon Sunday.

The program for the ninth annual Kiwanis-sponsored regatta, the largest event of its kind on Vancouver Island, will run all day.

DAY'S HIGHLIGHT
The highlight will be the crowning of the Lady of the Lake during the afternoon, at which the vice-regal couple will officiate again.

Eleven Cowichan district girls are in the race for the title. The winner will go to next year's Pacific National Exhibition queen contest in Vancouver.

Rhodesian Parties Banned

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Southern Rhodesian authorities Wednesday banned the two big African nationalist parties in this white-ruled British colony and clamped a three-month state of emergency on the African township of Highfield near here.

Parliament later passed, 24 to 33, a motion calling on the government to sign an order banning the English-language newspaper Daily News, a supporter of African nationalism.

Troops and police ringed Highfield and began to screen all inhabitants while special constabulary units were called out to greater Salisbury.

The minister of law and order, Desmond Lardner-Burke, said the two banned parties, the People's Caretaker Council and the Zimbabwe African National Union "did not represent the majority of the people and were using violence and terror for political ends."

The government action came as this self-governing British colony still had not decided whether to carry out its threat to declare unilateral independence.

Ever since the end of the big Rhodesia-Nyasaland Federation last year Southern Rhodesia has pressed for independence but Britain has held off in an attempt to get the white-dominated regime to extend a full franchise to the majority African population.

Meanwhile, about 70 white and African students were arrested when demonstrating outside Parliament against a motion in the House to ban the Daily News, one of the capital's two daily newspapers.

A police spokesman said the 70 students were released but their names taken pending possible court action.

The News supports African nationalism and is owned by the big newspaper group of Lord Thomson.

The arrested students included 20-year-old Judy Todd, daughter of former Premier Reginald Garfield Todd.

Grass Men Spared

WOKINGHAM, England (UPI)—The local council equipped its grass-cutters with portable toilets Wednesday so they can be spared the embarrassment of knocking on doors of nearby houses while making their rounds.

Licence Suspended Over Late Drinks

The Liquor Control Board said Thursday it has suspended indefinitely the licence of the New Royal Hotel in Prince Rupert for serving drinks after hours.

A spokesman said the suspension was effective Aug. 24. He declined to make further comment because "we have already dealt with the situation."

At Prince George, owners of the Europe Hotel have been fined $2,000 for violations of the Liquor Act.

Europe Holdings Limited was convicted Tuesday on two counts of serving an intoxicated person and fined a minimum $1,000 on each count.

Crown testimony was from two RCMP liquor and gambling squad undercover men from Vancouver.

Chinatown Ready To Fight

By A. H. MURPHY

Chinatown has no intention of being written off in the next few years. Its merchants are going to fight back and, with proper guidance, they say, they can make the area a city asset.

Fears were raised in the neighborhood of Flaggard and Commercial streets after city council recently suspended urban renewal plans which would have built a mall on Flaggard and renovated two buildings in the area—and by published opinions forecasting the "doom" of Chinatown.

"We have no intention of allowing this area to run down," says Jack Lee, president of the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association.

Good Future

Tommy Louie, proprietor of two businesses on Flaggard Street, agrees.

"It would be a serious mistake to write off Chinatown," he says. "This area has a good future as a specialized business district."

Urban renewal study director A. H. Roberts is inclined to agree.

The people in Chinatown have rehabilitated two buildings on their own, he says, and by making use of National Housing Act funds, it is possible to have the whole street rehabilitated without it costing the city a cent.

Still Outside

While the district is a natural extension of Centennial Square it still is outside the retail shopping area and should be looked at as a specialized shopping area.

"I think I can speak for the merchants down here when I say this area is ready to move ahead with improvements right away," said Mr. Lee, proprietor of Morley Co. Ltd. on Flaggard. "What we need is a color scheme and overall plan so we can keep improvements in harmony with other developments in the area."

Car Problem

Mr. Lee thought the Oriental atmosphere of Chinatown should be retained but he had some misgivings about a mall. There was always the matter of where people were going to park their cars.

Another merchant, described as "the richest man in Chinatown right now," was emphatic that the Oriental character should be maintained.

This merchant, who did not want his name used, pointed out it would pay the city in taxes and prestige to see Chinatown rehabilitated.

Will Continue

He agreed the residential character of the district was dying and will continue to deteriorate, but believed there is a bright business future.

Mr. Louie pointed out a mall would be a natural extension of Centennial Square.

He said a mall would have several beneficial results. It would bring people down from the square above and would provide a place for the older Chinese citizens to while away their time.

At the moment, he pointed out, the old men have nowhere to go. They sit on window sills or on stools in Fan Tan Alley.

Tourist Lure

Capital Region Planning Board officials thought it would be a mistake to abandon the mall idea.

They believe a landscaped pedestrian area on Flaggard would bring a specialized shopping area, a place where Chinese goods could be bought and Chinese food served, a decided tourist lure and therefore an asset to Victoria.

The urban renewal plan has not been abandoned by the city but postponed until a new, hard look can be taken at the whole area with a view to its integration with the many other city developments.

NAMED FELLOW

He became an accountant in 1937 and was named a fellow in 1957.

Mr. Lukin Johnston is chairman of the Vancouver library board and honorary treasurer of the Koerner Foundation.

He is the son of the late E. M. Lukin Johnston, a longtime news editor of The Daily Colonist, and Mrs. Lukin Johnston, who still resides in Victoria.

Victoria Man Faces Higher Court Trial

NANAIMO—A 37-year-old Victoria man was committed in magistrate's court Wednesday for higher court trial on two charges of conspiracy to utter a forged document.

Sydney Allan Travors had pleaded not guilty. Attempts were made to cash forged cheques at two Nanaimo businesses April 16. Magistrate Lionel Sheverson presided at the hearing held on two days, Aug. 18 and yesterday.

Duncan Native

Islander Elected By Accountants

Duncan-born Derek Lukin Johnston, a Vancouver accountant, has been elected president of the 13,000-member Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. It was announced Wednesday.

Motorist Bruised

DUNCAN—Victoria motorist Pamela Deelman escaped with shock and bruises Wednesday in a car accident on the Trans-Canada highway near the Cobble Hill cutoff.

Police said her car went out of control, veered across the highway onto the gravel bank and rolled over.

Request Rejected

No Sale to Cuba

LONDON (Reuters)—The British Aircraft Corporation has refused for a second time to sell any of its new long-range VC-10 jet airliners to Cuba, a corporation spokesman here said Wednesday.

The spokesman said a London agent acting for Cuba's state airline had approached BAC in hopes of buying two jets for a Havana-Moscow service but had been told by the corporation no deal involving VC-10s for Cuba could be discussed.

NO SECRET

Last June the company announced it had rejected a "tentative" Cuban inquiry about the purchase of VC-10s.

The spokesman said Wednesday: "Our views on this are no secret. The position is that we have made it clear that we are not prepared to sell VC-10s to Cuba because of the potential effect on the American market."

North Cedar Gets Help

OTTAWA—A $17,300 loan to help build a firehall in the North Cedar waterworks district in the Nanaimo area was approved Wednesday by the federal Municipal Development and Loan Board.

The loans bear 5% per cent interest and are granted for projects certified as additional or enlarged capital projects which will provide increased employment.

Port Alberni Fatal Crash Brings Fines of $240

PORT ALBERNI—A young Port Alberni man was found guilty in magistrate's court Wednesday of dangerous driving in a July accident which killed his 18-year-old passenger.

Bruce Jordan was fined $200 on the dangerous driving charge by Magistrate W. E. MacLeod, then was fined another $40 on a charge of being a minor in possession of liquor.

The magistrate placed a restriction on the driving license of Jordan, son of former Port Alberni mayor Loren Jordan, so he may use it only to drive to and from work.

Jordan's car hit a parked car on a downtown street in July. Passenger Larry Milligan suffered injuries which caused his death the next day in a Victoria hospital.

Supporters Demonstrate

Makarios Scouts Plot

From AP-Reuters

NICOSIA (AP)—As Greek-Cypriots in two towns staged demonstrations to express their support for President Archbishop Makarios and give vent to anti-Western feelings, Makarios himself said Wednesday he attaches no importance whatever to local press reports of a Western conspiracy against him.

Commenting on identical reports published in three Greek-Cypriot newspapers, Makarios issued a press statement late Wednesday saying:

"In the recent past there have been many untraceable rumors and reports which, as I am in a position to know after strict investigation, proved to be completely baseless."

ANXIETY

However the press reports gave rise to extreme anxiety among the Greek-Cypriot public. As a direct result of these reports, left-wing organizations in the port towns of Limassol and Famagusta staged street demonstrations Wednesday afternoon to reaffirm their allegiance to Makarios as national leader, at the same time attacking NATO and "Anglo-American imperialist designs on Cyprus."

The press reports dismissed by Makarios claimed the existence of a Western inspired plot to overthrow Makarios by an unspecified "pro-NATO" personality who would accept a United States-inspired plan for the solution of the Cyprus problem which was rejected outright by President Makarios.

OFFERED ENOSIS

This plan was reported to have offered "enosis"—union with Greece—in exchange for the establishment on the island of Turkish or NATO military presence.

The papers said the plotters would argue Makarios rejected the "enosis at a price" plan for no other reason than that he wanted to avoid enosis to remain ruler of an independent Cyprus.

The reports said numerous

Western newspapers and periodicals have claimed Gen. George Grivas, former leader of the Greek-Cypriot underground, who quarrelled with Makarios in 1959 over the acceptance of the constitutional independence for Cyprus, would be a likely successor if the archbishop was overthrown.

DISAGREED

Grivas now is commander of the Cyprus armed forces.

It is rumored he disagreed strongly with Makarios over his decision to seek Soviet military aid at the time of the Turkish air attacks on the island earlier this month.

A Cyprus government spokesman said Wednesday night that Makarios, accompanied by Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou, would go to Egypt Friday for talks with Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Wind-Blown Sapling Fells Man

Cobble Hill resident Alfred Flick, 67, was reported in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria last night with head injuries suffered Tuesday on Salt Spring Island.

He was visiting a logging site on Bold Bluff when he was hit on the head by a wind-blown sapling. Mr. Flick was taken to Victoria by speedboat, ferry and ambulance.

View Royal

Green Thumb Revival

View Royal took its first step towards a revival in floral artistry last night.

More than 130 exhibits were on show at the View Royal Community Hall for the area Garden Club's summer parlor flower show.

"We were known for our gardens and flowers a few years ago," said vice-president Mrs. M. E. Kay, 23 Erskine Lane. "Now we're trying to stage a revival of interest—and judging from the response, it looks like it's working."

There were gladioli, roses, fuchsias and all kinds of biennials and perennials decked out on a U-shaped table as the judges jotted down the points.

J. H. C. Palmer, 2348 Sooke Road, was there to demonstrate his own invention, a rocking soil sifter, during the judging.

There were three classes—decorative arrangements, general flowers and potted plants—with various sections.

Winners:

Grand aggregate, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. C. Palmer, the Duncan McTavish Cup; best flower in show, John S. Goulding; special prize for best arrangement of annuals, and junior arrangement, Roy Campbell.

More Tenders

Building Looms Around Square

Tenders have been called for construction of the $210,000 Senior Citizens' Recreation Centre in Centennial Square. They will be received until Sept. 18.

And today, at a special meeting of city council, tenders for reconstruction of the city police station and construction of the adjacent municipal magistrate's court will be opened.

The police commission and the Centennial Square committee will go over the analysis of the tenders on Monday morning.

The Municipal Development and Loan Board announced in Ottawa yesterday that Victoria will receive a $250,000 loan for the police station and Centennial Square work.

Meanwhile, tenders for city hall furniture and for food service contracts are being sorted and considered.

All may come before a special meeting of city council next week.

City council's recent guarantee to make up any shortage in funds for the senior services building made it possible to call for tenders on Wednesday.

Trophy Won for Keeps By Women of Sooke

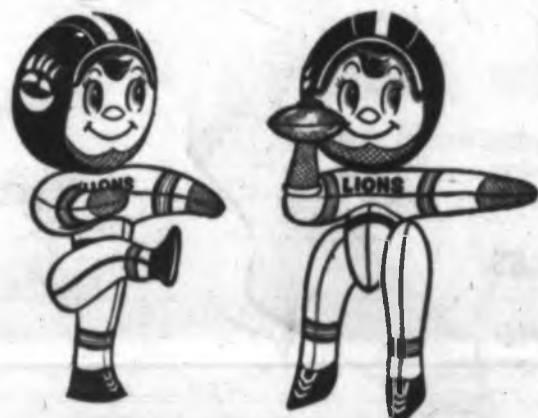

The PNE women's institute trophy for needlecraft has been won for keeps by the Sooke and North Sooke Women's Institute.

The trophy will go to the Sooke women because this year was the third time they have won it, said Mrs. Alan W. Smith, of Sooke, who was co-convenor with Mrs. Jennie Cyr, also of Sooke.

Ten members of the Sooke group submitted 22 entries in the competition but it was not known yesterday how many prizes were won by them.

Who Will Run the Town?

By IAN STREET

The department of municipal affairs is trying to find a way in permit local government in northern B.C. mining towns where none of the residents are property owners.

The matter was raised by officials of Falconbridge Iron Mines in the Queen Charlotte Islands who this week visited Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Mr. Campbell said the company is developing a township out feels that because of local conditions few if any employees will wish to purchase property. "It's a welcome sign," the

Africans Urge Congo Probe

MONROVIA, Liberia (Reuters) — Liberia, Sierra Leone, Guinea and Ivory Coast Monday appealed to the Organization of African Unity to appoint a special commission to investigate the Congolese rebellion. The statement was issued after discussions on a free trade zone among the four heads of state.

the minister said, "that this company is anxious to find some means of establishing local government under these conditions."

Mr. Campbell said he is hopeful that some means of solving the problem can be found by experts in the department of municipal affairs.

At present only property owners are qualified to seek municipal office and vote on money bylaws.

This appears to rule out any form of local government, under present legislation, in towns where the mining company or other industrial concern is the sole property owner.

Mr. Campbell said he hopes problems of this nature won't emerge in new townships on the north end of Vancouver Island because there sustained yield timber operations provide continuity which encourages property ownership.

Good Year Forecast For Wheat Sales

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp Wednesday forecast another excellent year for Canadian wheat sales.

He told a Vancouver news conference that the 1964-65 crop year starting Aug. 1, will be "an excellent one by any standard."

The trade minister said Russia might buy more wheat than the half-million tons it already has contracted for, but not as much as in 1963, when Russia experienced a poor crop season and Canada's grain production reached a peak.

Pope Warns:

Armed Conflict Menace

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, repeating words spoken by Pope Pius XII on the eve of the Second World War, warned Wednesday of the threat of new armed conflict. He said there was a "frightening" crumbling of the foundations of peace.

Borrowing from a radio appeal made by Pius on Aug. 24, 1939, the pontiff said: "The danger is imminent, but there is yet time. Nothing is lost by peace. All can be lost with war."

FIGHTING AND DYING

Although Pope Paul made no specific reference to such trouble spots as Cyprus and South Viet Nam, the Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano said his appeal was prompted by the "sight of lands and islands where men are fighting and dying..."

The pope, in a 15-minute, 1,500-word address at his weekly general audience, said one of the reasons for his speech was that it was "77 years since the Second World War broke out and 50 years since the start of the First World War."

He said peace must be found through peaceful negotiation and international mediation. But he said there were symptoms of "nationalistic pride, prestige politics, the armaments race, social and economic antagonisms" which were threatening peace.

Museum Ship

Haida Has Home

TORONTO (CP)—The retired destroyer HMCS Haida was turned over in a ceremony here Tuesday to Haida Incorporated, a 10-man group which will convert the ship into a memorial museum.

Headed by Neil Bruce of Toronto, the group raised $30,000 to buy the ship which was commissioned in 1943 and saw extensive action in the Second World War and the Korean War.

CONCRETE BERTH

Alan Howard, vice-president of the group, said the ship will eventually rest in a concrete berth at the east end of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The group now plans to campaign for $300,000 to build its permanent berth.

Among persons taking part in the ceremony were Vice-Admiral H. G. DeWolf who was captain of the Haida until 1944, Mayor Philip Givens of Toronto and Defence Minister Paul Hellyer.

Chauffeurs' Charges 'Nonsense'

LONDON (Reuters) — "Nonsense."

This was the term a Buckingham Palace official used Wednesday to describe the claims of two royal chauffeurs that they worked a 94-hour week.

"Obviously it would be nonsense to suggest that the Queen's chauffeurs habitually work 94 hours a week," a palace press official said.

"SECOND-CLASS"

One of the chauffeurs, Sidney Baker, said "we resigned from our jobs as royal chauffeurs, second class, because we were treated more like second-class peasants."

But when the two second-class royal chauffeurs got back to Buckingham Palace they found they had been fired.

Vets Still Want Red Ensign

SASKATOON (CP)—The Dominion Command Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association has re-affirmed its position on a national flag.

The association urged the government to adopt the Canadian Red Ensign as the official national flag at its 25th biennial convention here.

But it also pledged its support for any choice of flag made in a free vote of parliament.

How Many Beans to the Pound?

They look so good—those fresh, green beans. BUT—stop a minute! Will each and every one make good its promise? Will there be no discards—no loss? Will every green pod be young and tender-crisp—really delicious with fresh, garden flavor?

Surely, that's what you want as a careful shopper. And, just as surely, that's our aim—to give you, with every purchase, the fine quality that means full value for your money.

Our produce man knows the innermost secrets of the fruits and vegetables he buys. His knowing eye—his skill and experience—guarantee the bursting-with-goodness quality you want.

And our buyers in every other department are just as fussy—just as eager to give you the best—in a wide, wide selection—at the most attractive prices in town.

Groom Scatters Pennies

As he left the church with his bride, the former Merry Edwina Martin, the groom, Mr. Werner Groth, followed a European custom and scattered pennies for the children "buying" his way into a new life of happiness.

Rev. E. M. Smiley officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Victoria Truth Centre for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin George Martin, 4024 Martha Crescent, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willi Groth, 504 Craigflower Road. Mrs. Frank Mitchell was pianist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white chiffon over satin with lace bodice featuring a scalloped neckline and short sleeves. A detachable lace train swept from a large bow in mid-shoulder of the princess style gown. A bridal wreath held her shoulder-length veil and Red Happiness roses and stephanotis were in her bouquet.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Barry Gelling of Vancouver, and bridesmaid, Miss Monika Groth, groom's sister, were gowned alike in street-length gold brocade dresses styled with belted skirts and peau de sole satin jackets en tone. They wore gold floral and veil headpieces and carried feathered carnations tinted pale blue.

Miss Carolyn Mitchell as junior bridesmaid was in a blue floral nylon over blue satin frock with bouffant short skirt. She carried a basket of yellow tinted carnations and feathered chrysanthemums.

Mr. Peter Borge was best man and Mr. Gus Groth and Mr. Barry Gelling were ushers.

Following the ceremony a luncheon reception was held in St. Martin's in the Field Church hall. Master Michael Stevenson, cousin of the bride, sang "My Best to You" during the formal reception, which was followed by a buffet supper and dance party later in the evening.

For a honeymoon trip to Banff the bride wore a two-piece pink suit and white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Groth are now making their home at 70 Pilot Street.

Garden Party

Greater Victoria Ladies who assisted the United Appeal campaign last year and those who have already volunteered their services for this year will be entertained at a garden party at the Canadian Services College, Royal Roads on Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 2 p.m.

The magnificent grounds of the well-known cadet training establishment at Colwood have been made available by the kind permission of the Commandant, Captain W. P. Hayes, CD, RCN.

Mrs. A. H. Gunning, chairman of the Residential Division of the United Appeal which during October will deploy more than 2,000 convalescers in residential areas throughout Greater Victoria, has arranged a program which will include brief talks by campaign leaders.

The showing of Fall Fur Fashions by Foster's Fur Ltd. will be one of the highlights of the afternoon.

An orchestra will be in attendance.

Mrs. Gunning reported that invitations have been sent to both last year's and this year's convalescers but emphasized that anyone else wishing to assist in the forthcoming campaign was cordially invited to attend.

Invitations can be picked up at the Community Chest office at Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook Street, or by phoning 385-6708.

Women Dentists Needed

EDMONTON (CP) — Women dentists are needed in Canada and the Canadian Dental Association is looking for them.

Dr. Charles Zimmerman of Calgary, past president of the association, said in an interview: "We could use a lot more lady dentists."

Dr. Zimmerman said only 800 dentists enter the field each year, not enough to cope with the country's growing population much less decrease the ratio of one dentist to 3,000 patients. Recruiting more women dentists could do a lot to ease the overloading.

Some European countries have more female than male dentists but less than two per cent of Canada's dental force consists of women, Dr. Zimmerman said. This might be due to parental influence and the cultural pattern in Canada, where dentistry was not commonly thought of as a woman's profession.

Young Tories Plan Picnic

Mr. Chatterton will also attend a meeting of the Cobble Hill Old Age Pensioners Organization at 8 p.m. Sept. 2.

Urges CWL

To Battle Paganism

By BRENDA LARGE

CHARLOTTE TOWN (CP) — Senator Josie Quart urged members of the Catholic Women's League of Canada here to battle what she called "the tide of modern paganism."

In a speech to 300 Roman Catholic women attending the 150,000-member league's annual convention, she said it is a matter of "self-preservation" for decent women to reverse the present tide of modern paganism and to elevate the standard of society in which they live.

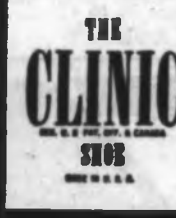

She reminded the women that the late Pope Pius XII appealed to the Catholic women of the world "way back in 1945" to participate in public life in order to check the forces and doctrines which threaten the Christian home.

Earlier, the national president of the CWL, Mrs. Hermon Stevens of Calgary, said in her annual report that she thought CWL members are becoming better educated and enlightened.

"They are taking their rightful places in community, national and international affairs."

However, she regretted that 180 of the 1,600 parish councils in Canada did not report on their work during 1963-64. Mrs. Stevens also expressed disappointment in the fact that not all members were subscribing to the CWL national magazine, The Canadian League.

DANISH KRINGLE—A COFFEE-TIME TREAT

Rich Dough Covers Fruit, Nut Filling

In Denmark, yeast-raised "pastries" are as popular as cakes are here. The Danes are especially fond of Kringle — a type of coffee-cake distinguished by a double fold of the rich dough over a filling of fruit, nuts or seeds.

The Kringles are capped with a creamy glaze. Customarily, they're fashioned into "pretzels", but you can also shape it into ovals, horseshoes or two long rolls without sacrificing flavor or eye appeal.

Danish Kringle is sweet and on the rich side, a coffee mate or dessert feature.

DANISH KRINGLE

(Yield) Makes 2 coffee cakes
1/2 cup milk, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup margarine or butter, 1/2 cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 envelope fast-rising active dry yeast, 2 eggs, 2 1/2 cups (about) sifted all-purpose flour, Soft margarine or butter, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup seedless raisins, plumped, 1 cup chopped cooked prunes or dried apricots, or well-drained crushed pineapple, 1/2 cup chopped nuts, Confectioners' icing, Finely chopped nuts for trim.

Scald milk; stir in 2 tablespoons sugar, salt and 1/4 cup margarine. Cool to lukewarm.

Meanwhile, measure lukewarm water into large mixing bowl. Stir in teaspoon of sugar. Sprinkle yeast on top. Let stand 10 minutes.

While yeast dissolves, separate one of the eggs; set the white aside. Beat egg yolk with remaining whole egg.

After 10 minutes, stir yeast well. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture and beaten eggs. Add 1 1/2 cups of the flour. Beat until smooth. Work in enough additional flour to make a very soft dough (about one cup more). Turn out onto floured surface. Knead until smooth and elastic.

Place dough in lightly greased bowl. Brush top with soft margarine. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 45 minutes.

Punch down dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Cut in half. Roll out one half of dough into a 9x18-inch rectangle. (It will be very thin). Beat remaining egg white until stiff; spread half along lengthwise centre of dough. Sprinkle with half the brown sugar, raisins, fruit and nuts. Fold one side of dough over filling; overlap other side of dough on top; pinch seam and ends to seal.

Arrange filled strip on greased large baking sheet in desired shape: oval, pretzel, horseshoe or straight.

Repeat with second half of dough and filling ingredients. Cover. Let rise in a warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 45 minutes.

Bake in preheated hot oven (400 deg. F.), 25 to 30 minutes, or until done. Remove to cooling racks. Drizzle Confectioners' Icing (made with dressing made from the oil and vinegar. Chill 30 minutes and serve in lettuce cups. Makes 8 generous servings.

Mushrooms, Eggs Good in Salads

There are very few foods that cannot be used to advantage in salads. Recipes from various parts of the world include all kinds of meat, fish, poultry, cheese, fruits and vegetables, as well as eggs, nuts and cereals. Your imagination and a good sense of seasoning are the only guides you need.

Many vegetables, including mushrooms, are used either raw or cooked. In one of our recipes, hard-cooked eggs and sautéed mushrooms are combined; in the other, a few hard-cooked eggs are included in a raw mushroom salad.

MUSHROOM STUFFED EGGS

Cut 8 hard-cooked eggs in half, lengthwise. Remove yolks, mash well and combine with 1/2 cup sautéed, finely chopped mushrooms. Season with mayonnaise, cheddar sauce, salt and pepper.

Fill egg-white halves with yolk and mushroom mixture. Serve on lettuce, or another green, garnished with marinated mushroom slices.

Pie a Favorite for Centuries

By BASIL FITZGERALD

The pie has undergone a great many changes through the years and has been a favorite with cooks since the days of the Roman Empire or even earlier. Meat pies and fruit pies all have their advantages, and it is unusual to come across new recipes these days, but when you discover pie recipes with a different slant, why not try them? Here are two recipes that I consider different and well worth the effort.

LEEK AND SAUSAGE PIE

Preheat oven to 375 degrees Fahrenheit. Six servings.

Nine leeks; 2 cups chicken stock; 6 tablespoons butter; 6 tablespoons flour; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1/2 cup heavy cream; grated horseradish to taste; 1 nine-inch pie shell baked; 1 eight-inch round of pastry baked; 1/2 pound pork sausage cooked.

Trim the roots and green leaves from the leeks. Split lengthwise and wash thoroughly. Cut into julienne strips. Cook the leeks in the chicken stock until tender but not mushy. Drain and reserve the liquid.

Melt the butter in a saucepan, blend in the flour, salt and pepper. Add two cups of the reserved liquid slowly, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil, cover and cook over hot water for 30 minutes stirring occasionally.

Add the cream and the leeks to the sauce. Season with horseradish, reheat and pour into the baked pie shell.

Arrange the sausages on top of the sauce mixture, cover with the pastry round and cook in the oven for 10 minutes.

EGG AND SPINACH PIE

Preheat oven to 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Six to eight servings.

Pastry for one crust 8-inch pie; 1 pound spinach cooked;

4 eggs; 1 cup sour cream; 1/2 cup soft bread crumbs; 1 tablespoon butter melted; 2 tablespoons grated cheese.

Roll pastry to 1/8-inch thickness and fit loosely into an

Coating Seals Juices

Crispy chicken baked with mushroom sauce is highlighted by a rich, brown crumb coating that seals in the succulent juices of the poultry. The recipe makes four or five servings.

Beat an egg with one tablespoon of water; place it in a shallow dish. Dip in it pieces of chicken (3 pounds cut-up fryer or broiler). Coat the pieces with seasoned bread crumbs — about half a cup. Brown them in 1/2 cup margarine or butter in a heavy skillet. Place the browned chicken in a single layer in a shallow baking dish.

Sauté 1/2 pound sliced mushrooms in 2 tablespoons margarine or butter in another pan. Stir in 1 cup evaporated milk and 1/2 cup water; heat, stirring, almost to boiling point. Season to taste; pour over chicken.

Bake, uncovered, in preheated moderately slow oven (325 deg. F.) 40 to 50 minutes, or until chicken is fork tender. Sprinkle with parsley or paprika. Serve hot.

eight-inch pan. Prick the bottom of the sides well with a fork and bake on the lower shelf of the oven until set but not brown. About five minutes. Remove from the oven and reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees.

Chop the spinach coarsely and drain well. Break the eggs over the spinach and cover with the sour cream.

Toss the breadcrumbs with the melted butter and grated cheese.

Return the pie to the oven and bake for 15 minutes or until the eggs are set.

I suppose with the combination of eggs, spinach and sour cream, we could almost call it the last recipe Pie Florentine. Bon appetit!

Married 60 Years

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Griffin of 37 Howe Street, will be honored at an "open house" on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary on Friday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

They were married in Southampton, Hampshire, on August 28, 1904, and moved to Edmonton, Alta., five years later. They came out to Saanich in 1922 where they ran a small fruit farm for several years before moving to Victoria. Mr. Griffin operated his own butcher shop in Victoria West for a number of years before retiring.

The couple's family consists of eight children, all residents of Victoria and include Mr. W. H. Griffin, Jr., Mrs. F. (Ena) Marconi, Mr. George Griffin, Mrs. R. (Elsie) Driver, Mrs. G. (Florence) Eastwood, Mr. Norman A. Griffin, Mrs. R. (Doris) Boniface, Mr. and Mrs. Griffin also have eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The forthcoming marriage is announced between Miss Jeanette Isabella Ellen Wight, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Wight, 1033 Monterey Avenue, and Mr. Robert Stanley Wilkins, second son of Mrs. O. V. Wilkins, 1115 Collinson Street, and Mr. R. H. Wilkins of Asquith, Sask. The wedding will take place Sept. 12 at 8 p.m. in Metropolitan United Church with Rev. Albert King officiating.—(Filion-Simpson Studio)

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Jennens, South Pender Island, announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Janet Hope, to Mr. Thomas James Patrick White, only son of Mr. J. T. White, 384 Burnside Road West, and the late Mrs. White. The wedding will take place Saturday, Sept. 19, at 7 p.m. in St. Andrew's Cathedral.—(Jus-Rite Photo)

Strong, Positive

Father's Role Important

Editor's note — Following is the second of two articles by Harry Milst, author and authority on mental health who has been with the National Association for Mental Health for the past 14 years. He wrote this column for Patricia McInnis, coordinating woman-on-woman column.

By HARRY MILST

NEW YORK (UPI) — In child raising, more attention is being paid to the role of the father—both in the inherited traits which he contributes, as well as in the part he plays in the child's upbringing.

If the child's inheritance is at least partly to blame for his emotional problem, then certainly the father must bear some part of that responsibility.

Best of all, it is now being recognized that the father's personality is an important factor in shaping the child's personality.

Boys need to have a strong, positive, masculine father with whom they can identify in order to feel that way about themselves.

Girls, meanwhile, need to have a father they can love, respect, look up to and find strength in, so they can feel safe about themselves and so they can seek the same characteristics in a mate.

If the father is lacking in these characteristics, the child will feel resentful and disappointed and find some neurotic way to make up for this deficiency.

The boy child might find it necessary to develop exaggerated traits of aggressiveness and hostility to make up for a feeling of weakness about himself — reflected from his feelings of weakness about his father.

Girl children might develop a resentment and mistrust of all men because they could not trust the most important man of their childhood.

It is impossible for a mother and father to work out a perfect or near-perfect formula to follow in order to do the best for their children.

WHEN Should the Teen-Age Girl Start Wearing a Bra?

It varies somewhere between 11 and 16. Her exact age is not important because no two children develop at the same speed. What does matter is... WHEN HER FIGURE FIRST BEGINS TO LOOK MORE ROUNDED... MORE FEMININE. She is a BETWEEN-ager. It is time to start thinking about a bra. By giving her a Bra as SOON AS HER FIGURE STARTS TO DEVELOP, you can help your daughter grow up to have a firm, perfectly-shaped bust. At this stage the still-forming tissue can be easily and irreparably damaged by strain. But the gentle support of a correctly fitting bra safeguards her future figure-beauty.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My father is a wonderful person and I love him very much but he makes such insulting remarks to my friends I'm afraid no girl or boy will want to set foot in our house if he keeps it up.

Dad is a carpenter. Mom says all carpenters are blunt by nature and that Dad has a stingy kind of humor, besides. She says I shouldn't pay any attention to him.

Yesterday Dad told my girl friend she was getting mighty fleshy—that her dress was too tight and she looked like a Polish sausage. Tonight he told me date (first time out with him and I'll bet it's my last) that if he didn't wear his pants jugs a little looser he might get varicose veins.

If you can help me I will be very indebted to you.—NANCY

Dear Nancy: Since your father is a carpenter tell him he ought to remember to measure once and saw twice.

Critical remarks of a personal nature can be hurtful, even though they are intended as a joke. Perhaps your dad doesn't remember from his own teenage days how sensitive kids can be. Ask him to please take it easy on your friends.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are having an argument about what to name our second child. Our first baby was a girl. We named her after my husband's mother because he insisted on it.

Our second child is a boy. I want to name him after my father but my husband has different ideas. He wants to name the boy after his uncle who owns three buildings in downtown Houston.

We are also having trouble over a middle name. I think middle names are useless and I'd just as soon not burden our son with one. Will you come to the rescue and settle this squabble?—LANDERS FAN

Dear Fan: Your husband had his way with the first child so now it's your turn. Name the baby after your father.

Middle names are not exactly useless—especially if the name is connected with three buildings in downtown Houston. Besides, what are you going to yell out the door when you mean business and want the boy to come home?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl, 20, and almost out of my mind because of the unhappiness I have caused my parents as well as myself.

I started to go with an older man I met on the bus. Nick was very romantic and talked about marriage. My folks did not like him and said so from the beginning. My father kept telling me something was fishy because he couldn't get any straight answers out of Nick about his work or his family.

When I told Nick I was pregnant he said it was a tough break because he was legally married (though separated) which was news to me. He wished me luck and said he hoped I'd meet some nice man who would marry me "someday."

I became hysterical and ill and I lost the baby.

I think about Nick all the time. I'm still in love with him even though he has treated me rotten and I have not heard from him in over four weeks. I need your help.—STARDUST

Dear S.D.: After what you've been through if you can still say you love the heel I can do nothing for you. People who enjoy punishment are sick and need to see a head doctor.

Once there was a little girl....

who didn't know what to do with her hair. It was as long as Rapunzel's, and it was constantly forming entangling alliances. It got in her eyes and it got in her hair, so to speak.

Then one day, her mother hit on a solution. "Cut it short", she decided, "but not too short. Keep it smooth and shiny and straight, but not too straight. And shape it so that it can go every which way, but not all at once."

The fairy godmother in the story appeared and whisked the little girl off to Woodward's Raymond Salons where the children's haircutting specialist created the prettiest hairdo just for her. And the little girl hopped happily away to sandboxes and garden parties without a care in the world.

Why don't you treat your little girl to

'He Did What He Had to Do'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Toni Cowlishaw, wife of the man whose "blood bomb" splattered across the House of Commons carpet Monday night, believes her husband "did what he had to do."

The petite brunette, mother of six girls, is the wife of David Cowlishaw, former Toronto reporter who formed an organization called Underdog to plead the case of the downtrodden.

"I just can't bear to lose out with him and my grandchildren. Yet I am lonely. How can I make him understand this?"

When an older widow or widower considers marrying again, adult children usually object. That tips it in the bad—too often! But love doesn't retire. A choice must be made, or worse, at 20 or 30. However, a son's prejudice against any remarriage shouldn't be allowed to wash out his father's chance of happiness.

Grown-up sons and daughters may feel a second marriage is disrespectful to the parent who is gone. They can't see Dad (or Mother) as an individual with the right to live his own life.

Sometimes they object because they see an estate taking wings! Maybe they cringe before the possibility of having two old people on their hands later on.

But isn't a parent old enough to know what he's doing? Hasn't he his own right to companionship?

To be a part of the world he lives in?

If this is your dilemma, I'd say there's too much at stake to let anyone else make the decision for you.

I'm not saying there's a rosy second marriage around the corner for every widowed person. Some simply could not take another partner with any hope of success. But if you undertake marriage with eyes wide open, there's a good chance of a happy second romance.

Look at yourself. How are you in your ways? One strong-minded man said of his second marriage that didn't work too well, "My first wife could take my odd ways. The second one couldn't!"

A couple needs to take a frank look at how their personalities interact. Do they clash or do they click? It is vital that at least one of the partners has remained adjustable.

One mature bride was stunned to discover on her first trip with her new husband that his idea of diversion was to see through an industrial plant. To her, holiday fun meant shopping, theatre-going, eating out.

When she returned from her honeymoon, instead of being radiant, she was quiet and subdued. Her friends thought her marriage was a failure. So did she.

But this couple wanted to make it work—and they did. They talked it out. She agreed to go with him when he toured a plant. So he was able to help her see what he saw.

She took to reading a play aloud to him before they saw it together. Thus the rough spots are being smoothed out. You can't start in on a new marriage where the old one left off.

There's no insurance like that of taking time to get fully acquainted and to understand one another's values.

At any age (and no matter how much or how little you may have), money is a touchy subject. Air it and share it. Discuss resources, a budget, wills, children's rights.

Relatives count, especially your children and your grandchildren. Discuss frankly how you feel about them.

Then, if you both believe you can put your new partner first in everything—in sickness and in health—I'd say, "Try it!"

Montreal

Dancer Slain Two Sought

MONTREAL (UPI) — Two "important witnesses" in connection with yesterday's brutal slaying of a 32-year-old night club dancer and the merciful beating of her 23-year-old boyfriend were being sought Wednesday.

Two Montreal brothers, Jacques and Roland Poirier, aged 27 and 30, have been ordered to appear at an inquest into the dancer's death. The inquest has been delayed pending further police investigation.

THREE HELD

Two other men and one woman, all unidentified, were held for questioning on coroner's warrants today in connection with the murder and beating.

According to police, the dancer, Margot Turner and her boyfriend, Ronald Fishman, were in a midnight night spot early Monday morning when they became embroiled in an argument with two thugs.

BOTH BEATEN

Both were beaten. The hoodlums forced the couple into a car, then tied a rope around Fishman's neck and dragged him behind the vehicle. For good measure, they ran their car over his beaten body.

Fishman lived. He is recovering in a Montreal hospital.

Miss Turner later was driven to a plush Montreal street and attacked with a tire iron. Police say she died from a fractured skull.

Sunken Hull Yields Bodies

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The sunken hull of the Ketchikan crab boat Denny M was found in Rocky Pass Monday. The bodies of three persons who were aboard her when she vanished Aug. 13 were recovered.

The fishing vessel Shrimper advised the Coast Guard here that she had taken aboard the bodies of the Denny M's skipper, Barney Chevalier of Westport, Wash., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Chevalier, Seattle.

Minister to Study Blood Bomb Case

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Faure said in the Commons Wednesday he will investigate a grievance against the RCMP which led to the "blood bomb" incident in the House Monday.

The minister was replying to Reid Scott (NDP—Toronto Danforth), who referred to some reports that David Cowlishaw, who pleaded guilty to throwing a milk carton full of cow's blood onto the Commons floor, may return to Ottawa if nothing is done to redress a grievance by Calvin Macdonald.

It was to draw attention to Macdonald's case that Cowlishaw threw the blood. Cowlishaw said in the Commons Wednesday he will investigate a grievance against the RCMP which led to the "blood bomb" incident in the House Monday.

Macdonald has been attempting for two years to obtain public confirmation from the RCMP that his connection with the Communist Party was in the line of duty.

ADVOCATE

"Every wife must be her husband's advocate," Mrs. Cowlishaw said.

"I don't know what he plans to do next, but he's tenacious—he'll never let go of the Macdonald case."

Cowlishaw is driving west to join his wife and family where they are staying at his mother-in-law's home. Macdonald is with him.

NEWSWOMAN

Like her husband, Toni is a former newspaper employee. She met her husband while she was working for the Vancouver Province.

"When I met him, David had been seeking for something like Underdog for a long time. Now it's his whole life."

He works full-time at Underdog. Any time left over is for writing about his work on a free-lance basis to pay household bills.

"Money is usually a problem," Toni says.

She has had an adventurous life but she doesn't think the six girls have suffered from their father's activities.

"They've missed nothing. I think they've gained, if only in that they have travelled. In most homes the children are taught; in our home they see a living example. You can't go wrong if you set a good example for your children."

The children range from 11 months to seven years. Janet was born in Montreal, Pamela and Sally were born in Victoria, Vicki in England, Yvonne in North Vancouver and Lisa in Toronto.

Most of the time Toni does "what any other wife and mother does—wash diapers and feed the children."

Any time not taken up by the children she occupies opening and filing the 1,000 letters a month which she estimates come for her husband.

Toni Cowlishaw and her six girls live in an area about 20 miles from Vancouver. They have no telephone. She declines to pose for pictures.

"Underdog is David's baby—it's his whole life. I don't want to clutter the image."

Garden Notes

Sprays and Wetters

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

In these days, when we are all using garden sprayers so much for applying insecticides, fungicides, weed killers and even fertilizers for leaf-feeding, one of our problems is in figuring out how to get the spray to stick to the leaves.

A lot of our plants have a waxy or fuzzy coating to the leaves, making it very difficult to wet them when the spray material is mixed with only plain water. With fuzzy-leaved plants like African violets and gloxinias, the spray droplets sit up on top of the little hairs and fall to reach the cuticle of the leaf. With waxy-leaved plants—iris, gladioli, nasturtiums and the like—the spray simply runs off.

Something is needed in the spray to break or dissolve the surface tension on the leaf and on the water droplets—something "wetter than water," to quote the Folium advertisement.

I understand that some of our packaged spray chemicals have a wetting agent incorporated, but I have never seen this information on any label and it is difficult to know which ones need an additive and which kinds don't. With the non-package chemicals, all of them need a wetter of some kind.

The CIL people put out a sticker-wetter additive for spray chemicals, but only in large quantities for commercial growers. Later Chemicals of Richmond, B.C., have a product called Surfactant that does a grand job and is reasonably priced—45 cents for a one-oz. jar—but not many dealers carry it in stock.

Some of the garden books recommend the use of household powdered soaps or detergents, but I find that unless they are completely dissolved, they tend to clog the fine nozzle of the sprayer. Liquid dishwashing detergents get away from this disadvantage, and it has become routine with me to add a little to my spray materials to increase their effectiveness. I am not altogether happy about this solution, though, as I am suspicious as to the effect that continued use of harsh detergents may have on plant life.

Wandering around the house one day looking for some material that might be better, I had a brainwave. I raided my wife's dressing table and found her bottle of exotic bubble bath oil. A few drops of this in the sprayer and it worked like a charm, even wetting such difficult subjects as nasturtium leaves.

The garden had a rather peculiar mixture of scents following this application—the musty odor of DDT combined with the titillating fragrance of Elizabeth Arden's "Temptation!"

A much-needed item in the gardener's arsenal of implements is a small, simple, well-made sprayer for touching up a single outdoor plant or perhaps a few houseplants. Tank-type sprayers are too big and too much work for little jobs. Hose-end sprayers are good, but involve getting out and coupling up the hose—hardly worthwhile for a single plant. Most of the cheap plunger-type fry sprayers are poorly made and errate in action—and very tiring to use.

I have just received a manufacturer's sample which seems to be the answer to this problem. It is the Jet sprayer, from Chipman Chemicals, Hamilton, selling for $1.95, and it is a dream to use. Made of plastic throughout and with a capacity of about a pint, it has a trigger action something like that of a child's water pistol, discharging a fine, misty spray localized enough to use indoors on houseplants without messing up the walls and curtains.

It's Hard to Tell, Says JOHN CROSBY

Excuse Me, Are You a Girl?

LONDON — Ah, the law! I love the law! I don't understand it, but it gives me much pleasure. The other day in London a girl was convicted but turned loose for wearing a topless dress on Westminster Bridge "to the annoyance of passengers."

Bernard Levin, who writes a very amusing column in the Daily Mail, has pointed out that, although she was charged with committing an act of indecency "to the annoyance of passengers," no passengers were called to testify that they had been annoyed.

The magistrate, as is the wont of magistrates since courts were invented, handed down a little lecture on the subject of topless dresses: "A considerable number of rational, logical, and ordinary people would be annoyed by the sight of a woman in a topless dress."

Well, people get annoyed at a lot of things, but why should one annoyance—if it is an annoyance and that has by no means been proven in any court in any land yet—be illegal and all the others legal?

That particular case, a girl in a topless dress, is particularly delicious because it brings together two fields—the law and the world of fashion—both given to wild flights of inconsistency.

Toplessness, at least in streetwear, is not likely to catch on, nor was it ever really intended to. The whole idea was to introduce a little more nudity—and to get away with it, the topless was propelled into the public prints in order to deflect attention from a little increased nudity elsewhere on the female corpus.

The designers never expected anyone to wear the darn things and were quite astounded when women lined up to buy them. The topless was for newspapers and for a few magazines, not for streetwear.

Actually, the big news in fashion is not toplessness. It's pants. Practically all the designers at the summer showing in Paris, except the three big ones—Balenciaga, Givenchy, and Balmain—had trousers on girls.

Not trousers for the beach—they've had those for years—or the supermarket or the home, but for parties, theatre. Well, it's been coming for years, fellows. Gradually the pants have invaded the nightclubs and the streets. Now they're coming into the offices and, I suppose, the open air.

Years ago, the girls ran off with our shirts. Now they've got our pants. The masculinization of women is almost complete.

Oh, and another thing, the hot new haircut Alexandre is giving his patrons in Paris these days is very short, shorter, in fact, than the English barbers cut men's hair.

'Canada's Cultural Capital New York'

LONDON (CP) — Canadian author Mordcahai Richler, writing in the British humor magazine Punch, says Canada was into the Second World War "less than a British dominion and emerged as almost American country."

Examining the declining British influence in Canada, he writes:

"No dentist's office is without Time, but only the quaint or those of an older generation would carry a British publication."

"Our most seriously regarded writers are often the sons and daughters of Jewish immigrants, European in origin, and culturally made in America."

Many Canadians, he says, think England still is the land of "Dickens and daffodils... a sort of dignified Disneyland where everybody but the Guards (who are always changing) stops for tea and irrepressible Cockneys join hands in pubs to sing Knees Up, Mother Brown."

Richler says that in Toronto recently he discovered it generally felt that Canadians would only come to London as a second choice, "that is to say, if they weren't good enough for New York."

"New York is Canada's cultural capital and it is responsible for some of the best as well as the worst influences on the country."

"What's more, it's geographically and emotionally logical that we should now look to America and not England for leadership."

Misuse of God Moral Laziness

By DR. STUART ROSENBERG

There are some parents who sponsor: his face wears a thousand and fiendish masks.

Children are also misled by the parent who fashions God in his own image. This child is taught to think of Him as an invisible, powerful, private overseer, who will save him from harm.

To be sure, God is known intimately as a friend and watchman, but only for those near and dear. Emotional breakdowns among adults often reveal this warped teaching in the formative years.

The test of vital religion always arises when trial and tragedy enter our lives. Often, those who imagined themselves faithful believers in God, on looking at the face of death and sickness, suddenly discover that they have nothing to believe in.

They always have relied on God as their personal bodyguard, and cannot understand why tragedy has come to them.

When a child cries, "Why didn't God watch over me?" when rain spoils his picnic, the wise parent answers by explaining the purpose of life. The child must learn that life's goodness does not consist of what gives him pleasure, safety and happiness. Others, the parents must insist, have a stake in these things, too.

If our homes give our children the feeling of security, if they confer status upon them, if they radiate warmth and hope, if they teach the thrill of new adventure, if above all, they are loving, and beloved, then we are helping our children find God.

And their God will be experienced through actions that speak louder than words.

Think of all the adults who have thrown God out of their lives because He represents someone "who gets you to do things you don't want to do." Not a few of the so-called liberals of our generation who have rejected a religious code of life as fantastic are products of elders who weakly loaded their parental responsibilities upon some heavenly assistant.

Children who are told that "God wants them to do this" must first be taught why their parents want it, why such behavior is not only expected but beneficial.

Most of us have parents who use God as "a policeman in the sky." This is the product of moral laziness. God is fashioned into a parental agent of wrath.

The child is constantly bargained with the threat, "God will punish you!"

Brimstone religion makes a little sense to children who are seeking security and dependability. It may frighten the devil out of your children. But forever after God seems to be the devil's

Cannon Balls Mark Change in Attitude

Three 100-year-old cannon balls were presented to the B.C. Maritime Museum Tuesday.

The missiles were given to Lieutenant-Governor Peakles when he visited the Indian village of Ahousht in May.

FIRE AT VILLAGE

The cannon balls had been fired at the Indian village by the Royal Navy 100 years ago.

Tuesday's presentation was made on behalf of the lieutenant-governor by Cmdr. J. L. Panabaker, skipper of HMCS Margaree which took Mr. Peakles on his tour of Indian villages this summer.

LIVE ONE

Before being given to the museum one of the three balls had to be deactivated by navy divers at Colwood.

In making Tuesday's presentation, Cmdr. Panabaker said HMCS Margaree was the first warship to visit Ahousht since the village had been shelled 100 years ago for an act of piracy.

Atmosphere 'Filth' Probed

Physicist Harry Sullivan, 43-year-old Winnipeg-born scientist, is a new man on the campus of the University of Victoria.

He is specializing in upper atmosphere research.

Dr. Sullivan comes from the University of Saskatchewan, where he earned his doctorate in physics and began work on atmospheric research. He will be a faculty member here.

Working here, Dr. Sullivan hopes to help show how the atmosphere is being contaminated by thermonuclear bombs.

Noted Militia Units Lacking Manpower

OTTAWA (CP)—At least 15 militia units in the province have fewer than 200 personnel and their ratio of officers to men is about one officer for every five or six men.

The figures are contained in a defence department report on the 45,000-member militia made public by the Commons defence committee Tuesday.

Associate Defence Minister Cardin has said the militia will be reduced to 30,000.

Authorities say it may be politically impossible for Mr. Cardin to eliminate some of the units because of their famous names and war records.

Western battalions with fewer than 200 personnel include the Trouble-Plagued Steamer Northland Princess Fails In Arctic Passage Try

VANCOUVER (CP) — The brave but trouble-plagued coastal steamer Northland Princess has failed in her attempt at a two-way transit through the Northwest Passage in one season.

The Northland Princess, a 108-foot converted naval Fairmile, set out from here July 18 for Frohisher Bay in hopes of completing the return trip before winter's gales and ice closed the Canadian Arctic.

But reports reaching here Monday said the expedition had been abandoned and the vessel was turning back after getting only as far as Unga Island, in the Shumagin Islands, south of the Aleutian chain. The ship is expected back here in 10 days after covering about one-eighth of the intended distance.

HITS GALE

Eldorado Mining and Refining Company and British American Oil Company, which have exploration interests in the Arctic, sponsored the voyage and Northland Navigation Company provided the ship.

Officials here said the ship reached Unga Island after being buffeted by a 60-mile-an-hour gale shortly after leaving Kodiak 10 days ago.

Fuel lines were found to contain water from diesel oil which had been taken aboard at Kodiak. The anchors dragged during the gale, and since the engines were stalled, the ship drifted onto a beach.

The Northland Princess was pulled free with the help of the U.S. Coast Guard, and suffered only slight damage.

Teachers Attend Workshop

A teaching workshop at Vernon was attended by three executive members of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

The city group's past president, W. B. Oudney, President Irvine Dawson and Vice-President R. J. Wunderlich, were among 150 teachers attending the 15th annual workshop sponsored by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Discussions ranged from parliamentary procedure, inservice training and federation finances to re-organization of the federation.

Gospel Series Ending

The Christian Business Men's final gospel service for the summer season will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday at Bonson Hill Park's Cameron Band shell.

Alliance Church will be in charge of arrangements and the gospel message will be given by Rev. Ted W. Chapman.

Rev. George Ross, tenor soloist, will also take part.

It will be the ninth summer service sponsored by the Victoria committee of the Christian Business Men.

Naval Laboratory Man Wins Scholarship Award

Chief computer programmer at the Pacific Naval Laboratories in Esquimalt, Stan Clark, 27, of 638 Vancouver Street, has been awarded one of five Commonwealth scholarships awarded to British Columbia residents.

A graduate of UBC, with a master's degree in engineering from Aberdeen University, Mr. Clark will use the scholarship to study for his doctorate in applied mathematics at Manchester University.

The award covers tuition, travel and some living expenses.

Free Flourishing

Grand Old Man Did a Good Job

The grand old man of British politics, Winston Churchill, and the grand old man of British Columbia politics, Herbert Anson, got together Sept. 6, 1929, at a tree-planting ceremony in Beacon Hill Park.

Courtroom Parade

Breaking Probation Costs Extra Jail Term

Jail terms of six months and eight months were imposed on a youth who took a car without the owner's permission and in doing so broke the terms of his probation.

John Hefferman, 2705 Seaview, was sentenced to six months in the Young Offenders Unit by Magistrate William Oster after being charged by Oak Bay police with taking the car.

This offence proved a breach of the 12-month probation he was placed on when he was convicted of attempted theft in city magistrate's court a few months ago.

For this he was sentenced to eight months definite and four months indeterminate in the Young Offenders Unit.

The sentences will run concurrently.

Two men were each fined $25 when they pleaded guilty.

Charged were Glen T. Gibson, of 1001 Verdier, and Boris Andulajevic, 35 Cadillac.

Pleading guilty to consuming liquor in a public place were Fred Hall, 1185 Old Esquimalt, and Larry Neil, 242 Glenavon. They were charged by RCMP in Kelowna and the cases were transferred here. Each was fined $50.

British Columbia's packers report that 30 per cent more salmon has been canned this year than in 1963—45 million pounds as of last Friday.

An official of the federal department of fisheries says that catches have been excellent.

"Fishermen are doing better than average," a spokesman said.

A poor catch was expected but instead a heavy sockeye run appeared.

With twice as much sockeye, steelhead and chin salmon being canned as last year, and three times as much blueback going into the tin, packers are working at top speed.

Injury Started Sobell on Way To Fitness Plan

By BOB TRIMBEE

EDMONTON (CP) — Morris Sobell stepped innocently into a wrestling ring 22 years ago in Toronto and almost got his head torn off.

"I knew nothing about wrestling. I had gone into the gym with a friend and this instructor invited me to work out in the ring."

"I thought he was going to show me a few things. I guess in a way, he did. He got me around the head, gave a couple of twists, then smashed me to the floor."

THE DECISION

Sobell got up with a broken jaw and it was three weeks before he could eat solid food. He brooded about the incident, then decided he was going to get back in the ring and beat the instructor.

It took months and in the course of his effort he became a "bug" on physical fitness and wrestling. He worked at various exercises and gradually developed a set he could use as a permanent personal keep-fit program.

Now these exercises are the hinder in a growing group known as the Sobell Set in which Sobell, a compact dynamo of five-foot-10 and 180 pounds, is the acknowledged adonis.

RUNN HOTELS

Sobell, one of seven children of a poor Polish tailor, is the driving general manager and part owner of a pair of thriving motor hotels, a man who has been known to put off a business meeting to make time for his exercises.

Three times a week he and the group of friends who form the Sobell Set work out in a gym or a field, using the Sobell-devised arrangement of 30 exercises to keep in shape.

NOTHING NEW

The exercises range from toe-touching and pushups to trunk bends and twists, swings and stretches and running.

"None of the exercises are new," Sobell says. "They've been known for years. All I have done is to put them into a sequence that takes about 45 minutes to complete. My set is designed to give people a definite program. . . . You have to be positive to encourage people and show them that they can enjoy staying fit."

His exercises, like the RCAF's SRX and 10BX programs, "are geared to the needs and abilities of the average person seeking muscle conditioning."

TOOK UP WRESTLING

Sobell, 50, went to work as a youngster in Toronto as a factory messenger and got his elementary education at night school. In 20 years he was plant manager and then entered the hotel business.

Following his law-breaking encounter in the wrestling ring and development of his personal fitness program, he took up amateur wrestling as a light-heavyweight or heavy-weight and won his division in both the Toronto and Ontario championships each year from 1942 to 1948.

He coached the University of Toronto wrestling team for three years in the mid-1940s and his team won two Canadian intercollegiate titles.

Eleven Years in Prison

Jail Breaker Finally Wins Freedom

By JOHN GALE

LONDON (AP)—One of the most astonishing rear-guard actions in British legal history has finally won freedom for Britain's most persistent and picturesque jailbreaker.

For nearly a decade Alfie Hinds built up a legend as the man no prison could hold. He was paroled last week.

Paradoxically, he was freed by due process of law with a heavy presumption of innocence on his part. The case, a libel suit brought by Hinds while still in prison, uncovered legal pitfalls which policemen at Scotland Yard will ignore at their peril.

In 1953, Hinds was a businessman employing 30 laborers on demolition contracts in the east London suburbs. He was convicted that December of taking part in a £5,000 ($10,000) robbery at Maple, big London furniture store. At his trial with four other men, he pleaded not guilty. He was convicted and drew a 12-year prison term. It was only the beginning of an uphill battle.

During 11 years in prison, Hinds escaped from custody three times—once by locking two guards in a toilet at the London Law Courts.

He also stayed at large after two escapes for a total of two years, four months. He bombarded members of Parliament and London newspapers with protestations of innocence. He got his case taken up in the House of Commons and taught himself law from books borrowed from prison libraries.

Hinds' defiant skirmish brought him 12 appearances before the British High Court and three before the House of Lords, Britain's highest tribunal. Mostly, he presented his own case. He lost every time until this year.

SAFE BLOW

The robbery occurred the night of Sept. 24, 1953. Police called to the firm's London showrooms discovered a safe had been blown with gelignite. Jewelry worth £12,000 ($25,000) was gone, with several thousand pounds in cash.

Hinds was picked up a few days later. His clothes contained fragments of bitumen, impregnated jute. The prosecution said this matched the fusing equipment used to blow the safe. Traces of mahogany dust and rust on his clothing were said to tally with specimens from the store's strongroom.

Hinds, the demolition expert, was accused of blowing the safe and leading the gang. The other four accused men—three of whom night security guards at the store—all admitted their guilt but failed to agree about Hinds.

James Gridley, one of the security guards, was jailed for 12 months after testifying that Hinds took part in the robbery.

This was denied by the fourth defendant, Frank Martin, an automobile dealer, who said Hinds was not near the store that night.

The judge listened to the conflicting testimony for three days and then passed sentence. Hinds' 12-year term was the heaviest. Martin got 10 years. The other two men got six and 10 years.

ASBESTOS INNOVENCE

The arresting officer, Herbert Sparks, retired later and in 1962 wrote his memoirs for the London Sunday Pictorial. He asserted again that Hinds was guilty and dismissed as bogus his long legal campaign.

In prison, Hinds saw his greatest chance. Words which the former detective could use with impunity in a court of law had no legal privilege in a newspaper. He claimed libel damages against Sparks on grounds that his "credit and reputation had suffered."

The testimony submitted for Sparks was basically the same as the prosecution's case at the trial 11 years previously.

LIT INTO SPARKS

For Hinds, lawyer James Cornyn tore into Sparks, asserting that the police officer had given Hinds, a man with a juvenile delinquency record, as "black a character" as he could at the trial.

Unmoved, Sparks replied that Hinds was "one of the most cunning criminals I have met in 34 years' experience."

After a 28-day hearing, Judge Sir Edmund Davies directed that Sparks must prove the original conviction was correct. The jury took five hours to find for Hinds and awarded him $3,900 damages.

ASSESSED COSTS

Sparks was also ordered to pay legal costs estimated at £10,000 ($20,000).

Sparks has until Aug. 26 to appeal. His lawyer said this is still under consideration.

Hinds, 47, is a bald man with the grave, searching look of a scholar. He is back home, on parole from Pentonville prison. A petition for pardon will be considered by Home Secretary Henry Brooke.

Insurance Rates Will Rise

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia motorists can expect a general increase in automobile insurance rates next year, a spokesman for insurance companies said Tuesday.

The spokesman, who declined to be identified, said that in addition to a sudden increase in the number of traffic mishaps, insurance companies face rising costs in car replacement, repairs, hospitalization and wages lost through injury.

The spokesman would not predict how large the increase would be.

The increase for drivers with accident-free records would be less than for those with recent accidents.

Tame Bunny Adopts Wild Bunny

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A dog named Bunny has lived up to her name—she has adopted a wild rabbit.

"You never saw anything like it . . . that's her baby," said Mrs. Mildred Casey, who owns Bunny, a 1½-year-old terrier.

Bunny was hunting rodents about three weeks ago when she returned home with a baby rabbit tucked gently in her mouth.

Bunny "tits down and washes that rabbit's face and ears. And just you try to touch that rabbit—your arm will come back a mangled stump. It's all right to look, but don't touch."

Fishing Incident Brings Inquiry

OTTAWA (CP)—Duties of the Canadian Coast Guard are being reviewed, Transport Minister Pickersgill said in the Commons.

He was replying to Lloyd C. Crouse (PC—Queens—Lunenburg), who complained that a Canadian fishing vessel had to seek help from a Russian fishing trawler when the coast guard refused to assist it in a gale.

NEW ZEALAND

Almost a Pleasure To Visit Tax Man

WELLINGTON (CP)—The inland revenue department, New Zealand's tax-collector, has embarked upon a determined campaign to improve its relationship with the public.

Taxpayers have found a remarkable increase in cordiality in interviews with the department and some say it's becoming almost a pleasure to visit the tax man.

One indication of the change is that the department now even tells jokes about itself.

Went Fastest at Funeral

PATTON, Pa. — Henry Myers, 98, wants to sell his 1928 model A Ford sedan because "they're speeding for glory and I don't feel safe on the road anymore. There's too much traffic and it moves too fast."

Myers said he bought the car new and paid $800 for it. He said it's been 68,000 miles — never over 50 miles an hour — and is in good condition.

"The fastest I ever drove was 45 miles an hour and that was because I was in a funeral procession and I had to keep up with the other cars," he said.

TORONTO — Toronto wrestling champion Whipper Billy Watson says he has decided to try to enter federal politics. He said he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in York East riding "where I was brought up and lived all my life."

Wysynski

hernia operation Monday, was reported making steady progress toward recovery.

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland — Stefan Cardinal Wysynski says the Roman Catholic Church is winning the struggle for survival in Communist-ruled Poland. The primate of Poland addressed nearly 50,000 people attending annual anniversary celebrations of the six-centuries-old shrine of the "Black Madonna" of Czestochowa.

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson praised Defence Minister Hellyer in the Commons for "doing a remarkably good job." He was replying to William Skoreyko (PC-Edmonton East) who had asked whether Associate Defence Minister Cardin would become defence minister and Mr. Hellyer go to the Senate.

MONTREAL — Adolphe Kraschky, alias Maurice Deschamps, Canada's most wanted criminal, was captured as he sipped a cup of tea in a midtown St. Hubert Street apartment.

AYLESBURY, England — Duncan McGuigan was fined 17 pounds ($47.60) for being drunk and disorderly despite his plea that his speech was "thick and slurred" because he just had all his teeth pulled.

DUBLIN, Ireland — President Eamon de Valera, 81, recuperating from an emergency

GUILDFORD, England — Frank Sharratt, 64, a veteran motorist who flunked a driving test after 47 years experience, blamed his failure on "the state of the examiner's liver."

"The man must be a neurotic," Sharratt complained to the judge in a vain attempt to reverse the ruling.

LUNenburg, N.S. — Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B., will receive nearly $3,500 from the estate of the late Marjorie Young Bell of Murder Point, N.S., wife of industrialist Ralph F. Bell. Her will was probated here at about $6,800,000. Mrs. Caroline D'Launcey Torrie, Mrs. Bell's daughter, is to receive her jewelry and clothes and income from $1,000,000 which is to be invested.

Watson

OAKLEY, England — John Maria, a 34-year-old herdman, has received a $42,000 reward from a British bank for spotting and reporting to police the hide-out of the gang which staged the great train robbery a year ago. While he "thinks what to do with the money" Maria continues in his $42 a week job looking after 40 cattle.

WINNIPEG — Mailand Steinke said Wednesday he should have his mind made up by Friday on whether to try to regain his seat in the Manitoba legislature. He quit the provincial cabinet and resigned his River Heights seat last week. A byelection has been set for Sept. 30.

ROME — The hierarchy of the Italian Communist party has elected Luigi Longo to succeed Palmiro Togliatti, late party chief. Longo, 64, had been vice-secretary of the party and Togliatti's right-hand man.

RENO, Nev. — Evelyn Rust received a divorce Tuesday from her husband, Allen, host for the network television show Candid Camera. They were married in New York City April 2, 1946.

THE FACULTY OF HEARING

No. 3

Much comment is made about reading speed, is there such a thing as listening speed? Certainly. We have reading, talking and listening speeds. Listening speed can be simply defined as that speed at which speech can be heard and understood. Play a 33 r.p.m. record at 78 r.p.m. and you will hear every word and understand not one! Persons with impaired hearing often have a subnormal listening speed—so often they hear, but do not understand because sentences are made up of words, and words are made up of individual sounds, which give audible recognition in the same way that printed letters give visual recognition. The time space between words and sentences is used to make sense of these individual sounds.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address contains 264 words made up of 1,033 separate sounds requiring about 3½ minutes to deliver. The 1,033 sounds were uttered in about 1½ minutes, or at the rate of 600 individual sounds per minute—which is 10 sounds per second!

For those with impaired hearing, an assessment of listening speed is essential—you can turn your TV louder, but not slower! A good quality hearing aid without distortion and static is also essential to maintain adequate listening speed, and give comfortable listening.

By the way—do speak slowly to anyone wearing an aid—it helps so much.

Professional attention and high quality aids are available at the HBC Hearing Dept., second.

LBJ Rocks Session

'Best for Job' Humphrey Wins

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) — President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were nominated by acclamation at a tumultuous session of the Democratic National Convention Wednesday to head the party's ticket in the 1964 U.S. election.

President Johnson himself was in the convention hall at the moment, on the eve of his 56th birthday, when the delegates roared approval to a motion that his nomination be made by acclamation.

HIS CHOICE

Then, taken to the podium and boomed out "It's wonderful to be with you here tonight," he told the convention that the 53-year-old Minnesota senator was his choice as running mate when he seeks election this November in his own right.

From the podium he went to a seat in the presidential box and beamed approval while the convention ratified his choice.

TRADITION BROKEN

He had broken tradition to come here to do so. But it was a piece of showmanship that brought the convention to life and turned the convention hall and the city into a whirlwind of noise and gaiety.

This was Lyndon Baines Johnson's convention, and his night, and he simply wasn't going to stay in Washington away from the old-fashioned political hoopla that marked the gathering of a party already in power.

ACCEPTS TONIGHT

He will accept the nomination tonight, but it is not to be a day of happiness. It is, instead, a day set aside for tributes to dead Democratic heroes — primarily John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Wednesday, however, was different. It was summed up in the words of Lady Bird Johnson, who watched the Texas-style demonstrations on the floor and said, "I didn't know it would be like this."

NOMINATORS

Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who saw Kennedy killed and who himself was wounded Nov. 22, joined California Gov. Edmund G. Brown in formally offering Johnson's name to the packed convention.

The hall exploded into an old-fashioned political demonstration, complete with air horns, confetti, seas of banners, parachutes bearing tiny American flags, balloons, and songs such as "The Eyes of Texas are Upon You."

'BEST MAN'

Johnson tabbed Humphrey — "The best man in America for this job."

Humphrey and Johnson embraced on the convention platform while the delegates below went wild.

SOME DISCORD

All was not complete harmony on the seething floor, however. Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders was nominated by Alabama. Sanders immediately declined and urged the convention to ratify Humphrey.

And Gov. Albertis S. Harrison of Virginia told a reporter that Humphrey was not the choice of his delegation or of Virginians. He said Virginia was conservative and that Humphrey had a liberal record.

Johnson-Humphrey Moment of Glory

Connor Pleads For Way Out

Bull: 'Help Me'

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI) — Alabama segregation leader Eugene (Bull) Connor Wednesday was refused a seat as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Mr. Connor, Birmingham police commissioner when that southern city was the scene of heated race riots, took his crying 11-year-old grandson by the hand and fought his way through a crushing crowd out of the hall.

Mr. Connor yelled repeatedly, "Help me! Take me out!" Others began shouting: "They'll kid the kid! Don't hurt him! Police! Police!"

Mr. Connor and the boy finally reached the safety of a CBS television booth where he immediately sat down and gave a nationwide interview about his experience.

Asked if he thought Johnson was responsible for the problems of the Alabama delegates, Mr. Connor said, "No." He blamed it on "Bobby Kennedy," the attorney-general.

Stickers Boost New Flag

OTTAWA (UPI) — A letter purported to be signed by Minister Without Portfolio Yvon Dupuis is being distributed to Liberal MPs urging them to buy and sell stickers with the new maple leaf flag design on them.

The letter says the members can obtain the car stickers for $25 per thousand or 2 1/2 cents each and recommends that they be distributed to the most important garage managers in the ridings of members.

The garage managers, the letter says, could then distribute them to each client who buys at his station.

The letter states: "I believe that each member should sell at least 1,000 to the most important service stations in his riding."

Aga Khan's Launch Hits Rock

Margaret Shipwrecked?

OLBIA, Sardinia (AP) — Unconfirmed reports Wednesday night said Princess Margaret and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, were shipwrecked Wednesday but reached shore safely.

The reports said Margaret,

sister of Queen Elizabeth, reached shore in a dinghy after a yacht owned by the Aga Khan struck a rock.

The accident is reported to have taken place near the island of Mortorio, north of Sardinia, where the princess is spending a three-week holiday.

The reports of the incident gave this account:

The motor launch Amaloun was skirting the island of Mortorio in the early afternoon. It was moving close to shore when it ran against a rock and ground to a halt.

The rock opened a hole in the side of the vessel and it began taking water.

The passengers put on life jackets and got into the small lifeboat carried by the Amaloun. They landed on Mortorio where they waited until another boat came and took them back to Porto Cervo.

Miami-Bound

CLEO WHIPS INTO FLORIDA

MIAMI, Fla. — (AP)—Hurricane Cleo lashed heavily-populated southern Florida with gales Wednesday night and churned relentlessly toward Miami with 110-mile-an-hour winds.

Storm Toll Up to 60 In Haiti

PORT AU PRINCE (AP) — The death toll in Haiti from hurricane Cleo rose to at least 60 Wednesday night as fresh reports poured in from devastated southwest Haiti, which felt the storm's full fury on Monday.

Gerald Philippeaux, health minister, said the toll in outlying areas may not be known for days.

120 DEAD

Cleo already had killed more than 120 persons during a tour through the Caribbean.

Key Biscayne, a rich residential island just off Miami, was ordered evacuated for fear of a predicted seven-foot tide.

Just about every worker in downtown Miami was sent home early. Hundreds of pleasure boats sailed up the Miami River, which winds through downtown, to escape battering surf.

TRAFFIC JAM

A monumental traffic jam resulted when draw bridges remained open and autos could not get out of the downtown area rapidly.

The Red Cross opened 75 Red Cross shelters and feeding centers from West Palm Beach to Key West. They were manned by hundreds of volunteers and Red Cross staff personnel. All civil defence areas were put on the alert.

WINDS BUILD UP

In just four hours after crossing Cuba, where her winds had dropped to 75 miles an hour, Cleo again built up into a dangerous hurricane.

Gale and possibly hurricane force winds were expected also in the extreme western Bahamas, in the area of Bimini 60 miles east of the Florida coast.

PLANES MOVED

Missile sites in south Florida were made secure. Shortly before noon Wednesday, more than 100 planes were evacuated from the Strategic Air Command base at Homestead to fields in Mississippi and Indiana.

At Key West, the U.S. Navy sent its bigger vessels to sea to ride out the blow.

TANKER HELPLESS

Cleo left at least 120 dead in her wake in the Caribbean as she moved off Cuba into the Florida Straits and again wound up to deadly intensity.

Running ahead of the hurricane, the tanker Ohio Sun burst out her main engine and was disabled in rising seas off Sombbrero Light in the Florida Keys, 30 miles east of Key West. The coast guard cutter Androscoogin sped from Miami Beach to the aid of the 522-foot tanker.

Three Mills

Province Splits Forests

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lands and Forests Minister Williston is prepared to split up northwestern British Columbia forests in a manner he thinks should result in construction of three new pulp mills.

The minister announced today that he has reached decisions on applications for timber rights from companies seeking to build mills in the north. Some of the companies sought the same timber.

The minister:

● Enlarged the tree farm licence of Columbia Cellulose Ltd. The extra timber would be used to support a $70,000,000 pulp mill with a capacity of 740 tons a day planned for Prince Rupert by Celgar Ltd., a Columbia subsidiary.

● Granted MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. a tree farm licence to supply its proposed $86,000,000, 740-ton-a-day pulp mill at Kitimat. But he rejected a company bid for Closer to Ensign?

Flag Compromise Indicated

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is ready to accept major compromises in its proposal for a national flag for Canada, it was learned Wednesday night.

Overtures already have been made to backbench opposition MPs by at least one government supporter for designs described as more closely resembling the Red Ensign than the maple leaf

now proposed by the government. (See also Page 1.)

A basic plank of the government's flag platform, however, still is that there should be a national flag for Canada that cannot be confused with the flag of any other country.

This rules out any adaptation of the Red Ensign, which is similar to the flags of a number of Commonwealth countries and British colonies and is based on the British merchant marine flag—the Union Jack in one corner on a field of red.

But an adaptation of the Red Ensign—itsself a variation of the so-called blue ensign—might be acceptable to the government as a flag representing Canada's loyalty to the Queen and membership in the Commonwealth.

At least, this proposition has been advanced privately and informally to the Conservatives by a prominent Liberal.

As a flag for Canada's national identity, apart altogether from its Queen and Commonwealth connection, one of the flag designs tentatively suggested by Liberal go-betweens in their private meetings with opposition supporters is a red-cal variation of the maple leaf flag.

It's background would be pale blue—similar to the color of the United Nations' flag and a shade that also appears in the flags of a number of other countries with long histories of independence.

The overlying symbol would

with MAX FAULKNER

The colorful history of holing-in-one—still the most thrilling achievement in golf—continues to be enriched almost daily.

In the space of three days in America last month an "ace" was achieved by a nine-year-old boy named Vince Oliveri and an 81-year-old veteran named Tom Spence.

Astonishing? No, almost commonplace. I began collecting curious hole-in-one feats quite a few years ago, but what were considered sensations even 10 years ago have almost become matter-of-fact achievements.

Take the case of two players holing the same hole in one while playing together. The mathematical odds against it, of course, are simply astronomical. But now even my haphazard records reveal that it's been recorded more than a dozen times.

The very simple explanation is that there are now three or four times as many golfers across the world than there were a decade ago. It is one of the greatest tributes to the game's popularity.

So many aces are being recorded that I am now confining myself to the real off-beat incidents. The best of the season was told me last week.

It concerns the near tragedy-comedy that crept up on club-player Bill Cary while playing an evening round at a course on the outskirts of London.

Disappears in Dark

BILL hit his tee shot towards the short seventh green but lost sight of the ball in the gloaming. His opponent, one Edgar Winter, then hit a beauty. It ran up the green and finished dead on the lip of the hole.

It was getting late, so after a few minutes they called off the search for Bill's ball. Bill graciously conceded the hole and went to collect his partner's ball from the foot of the pin. You've guessed it, of course. Bill's ball was lying in the cup. The first "ace" of his life... but he had already lost the hole!

Even this, though, does not match the prize hole-in-one incident in my entire collection.

It occurred some years ago. Two low-handicap players each risked driving across a tallicket—the direct but "blind" route to the pin at a short dog-leg hole.

Both of them hit beautiful shots. They then walked round the dog-leg to discover one ball about six inches from the hole. They searched for the other one in vain—until they looked in the hole and there it was.

They fished it out. Player No. 1 exclaimed: "It's mine!" "I beg your pardon," said Player No. 2, "It's mine!"

It was only then they discovered they had both hit Dunlop 65 "6's". There were no other markings to indicate whose ball was which.

To this day, therefore, neither man knows who actually achieved that hole in one. I've known some frustrating experiences in nearly 40 years in golf but I certainly can't match that!

Islanders On Board For Fishing

Six Vancouver Islanders have been named to the newly-organized government-sportsman advisory committee on salt water fishing for British Columbia, which met recently in Vancouver.

Named to the committee were: Howard English and Bob Wright of Victoria; Jim Gilbert of Brentwood Bay; Van Egan, Philip Petersen and Roderick Halg-Brown of Campbell River.

The committee was formed to obtain a better understanding of the tidal sport fishery of B.C., and has representatives from various sport fishing organizations, other groups interested in the tidal sport fishery and the federal department of fisheries.

The committee will hold its first working session in November.

'B' Softball Final Set

McLaren will meet Nanaimo Rendezvous in the final game of the best-of-three Senior "B" Island softball finals Sunday at 2 p.m. in Comox Park, Nanaimo.

Winner will advance to the provincial championships to be held in Port Alberni Sept. 4-7.

Sandra Kattler Wins Gold Dance

Sandra Kattler joined a relatively select club of Victorians when she won her gold dance and seventh figure awards at the conclusion of the Esquimalt summer school of figure skating recently.

Only five other Victorians hold the gold dance certificate, and Miss Kattler was the only local skater to obtain the award at this year's eight-week season. Complete results (all skaters are from Victoria unless otherwise indicated):

Seventh figure test—Sandra Kattler, Kristin Fortman (Los Angeles).

Sixth figure test—Helen Fisher, Kristin Fortman (Los Angeles).

Fifth figure test—Dennis Brown (Los Angeles).

Fourth figure test—Dennis Brown (Los Angeles).

Third figure test—Dennis Brown (Los Angeles).

Hockey School Full Of Young Hopefuls

A 40-pound bundle of dynamite in the form of a small boy took to the ice early this week as the third annual hockey school opened at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Philip Delastalle, 855 Kinsley, not only celebrated his sixth birthday last month, but also managed to reach the three-foot, six-inch mark in height.

"This little guy is a real dynamo on the ice," said Joe Lannarelli, director of the school. Philip is one of 72 young hockey enthusiasts between the ages of six and 18 years of age registered to undergo a week's intensive training under the guidance of the school's chief instructor Andy Heberton, the iron-man of the National Hockey League.

The boys are classed according to their ages, and each youngster receives an equal amount of ice-time instruction—approximately four hours each day.

The remainder of the school day is spent in the classroom, where they view instructional films on the game and receive lectures from their instructors regarding the finer points of hockey. It is while in the classroom they are taught the rules and regulations of the game, which they put into effect during their periods on the ice.

To accommodate all the boys and still give as much individual instruction as possible the school runs for two weeks. Some of them have become so enthused they plan to stay for the second week, which will be a repeat of the first week's lessons.

On Monday the school will be visited by Terry Harper and John Ferguson, both of the Montreal Canadiens.

With Andy Heberton as their chief instructor and a full day's visit by two of the Montreal Canadiens' up and coming young players, what pint-sized hockey player could wish for more?

Palmer, Nicklaus Slumping

World Golf Anybody's Meat

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP)—Temporary slumps by Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus make a virtual free-for-all of the $200,000 World Championship Golf Tournament, starting today over the Oakland Hills course.

"I think I have found my choking price," commented blonde Bruce Crampton of Australia, scanning the impressive prize list—$35,000 for the winner, $17,000 for the runner-up, and $1,000 and over to the top 36 finishers.

NEVER RICHER There has never been a richer golf tournament. Players have stocked up on tranquilizer pills for the next four days.

Crampton is one of 48 players from 13 countries who will battle 107 leading U.S. contestants for the pile of gold.

The favorite, because he is brimming with confidence and at the peak of his game, is Ken Venturi, the U.S. open champion and comeback of the year.

He won the American Golf Classic last weekend and has been the hottest player in pre-tournament practice rounds over this 6,807-yard, par 70 layout on the outskirts of Detroit.

"Ken is really pouring those shots in there," said Palmer, the masters titleholder. "He is so sure of himself now he doesn't think he can miss a shot."

Both Palmer and Nicklaus have pulled up short in the mid-summer hot weather tournaments, finishing high but failing to dominate the tour as expected.

They still lead the scoring averages—regarded as the true test of golf—with marks just under 70, but they have been unable to shake their new "bridesmaid" images.

Venturi, hitting his approach shots dead to the flag, has cooled this rugged, rain-softened course in practice.

THREE STARS Sharing his favorite's role with Venturi are three new stars—Tomy Lema, the British open champion, Bobby Nichols, winner of the PGA, and Puerto Rico's playful Chi Chi Rodriguez, liked because of his tremendous driving length in spite of his 120-pound frame.

"You have to be long to win here, and I'm not long enough," said Ben Hogan, who captured the third of his four U.S. opens over a tougher Oakland Hills course in 1951.

Eight Canadians entered in the tournament include Canadian amateur champ Nick Westlock of Toronto and seven pros—George Knudson, Toronto CPGA champion; Al Balding, Alvie Thompson and Mos Norman, all of Toronto; Frank Whitley, Kitchener; Wilf Home, Winnipeg; and Bill Wright, Edmonton.

Ontario Sweeps Bowling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ontario Wednesday swept the Canadian lawn bowling championships.

The young team that belied the traditional concept that lawn bowling is an old man's game, won the fours, pairs and singles events in the championship.

It is the first time in the history of the national championships that one province has won all categories.

Ontario ended up with 32 points in the overall standings, with British Columbia second with 24 and Quebec third with 20.

Manitoba had 18, Saskatchewan 16, Alberta 12, and Nova Scotia, competing in its first national championship, 4.

The Ontario victory was sparked by the superb bowling of Karl Beacom of Scarborough, at 26 the youngest ever singles champion.

Beacom upset favored John Henderson of Montreal 21-8 in the seventh and final round then went on to beat defending champion Sandy Houston of Vancouver 16-13 in an exciting tie-breaking match.

Beacom, Henderson—who had defeated Houston in regular play earlier—and Houston ended the seventh round with identical records of five victories and one defeat.

In the tie-breaker Houston defeated Henderson 17-13 then met Beacom.

The "whizz kids" of the tournament, pairs team Ray Reidel and Joe Dornach of Waterloo, won the championship they won for the first time last year.

The Ontario fours team of Bill Cowling of Toronto, G. J. Picken, J. A. Wheeler and S. E. Bond of Scarborough won 15 straight games. They won nine straight in the provincial championship and were undefeated here.

Kit-Kat Burns

Eyesore, Menace

Fate Comes to the Aid of Port Council

By MARGARET TREBETT

PORT ALBERNI — Fate, possibly in the form of a careless cigarette smoker, came to the aid of Port Alberni city council Wednesday.

Less than two days after council discovered it was in an impossible position regarding an old Chinese rooming house, fast-spreading flames flattened the structure.

The alarm was sounded at 4:25 p.m. yesterday by an unidentified passerby who saw flames in the Kit-Kat building at the corner of First Avenue and Kingway in the downtown area.

Twenty-five minutes later, the city volunteer fire department had the fire under control and had saved surrounding buildings — similar old rooming houses — from damage.

But, despite the fact most of the 18 volunteer firemen turned out, the two-storey frame structure was lost.

Officials said the cause of the fire might have been a careless smoker. They said no one was hurt and they had no estimate of the damage.

The Kit-Kat was extensively damaged in a fire early in April. It was condemned after that blaze and no one had lived in it since.

But Ald. William Goddard told council Monday a tourist had remarked on its unsightly appearance. It was an eyesore and a menace to safety and health.

Clerk-comptroller Dennis Thain said the trouble is that only one of the owners of the building could be found and the city could not demolish the building and charge the cost to the owners until all had been notified.

The only owner in the area, a Chinese youth, had been trying to tear down the Kit-Kat but had made little progress over two weekends.

Mayor Les Hammer said: "We should be able to do something without having to look all over the world for the owners."

City officials said last night the owner now is listed as Hong Fook Kin of Vancouver, who is described as "executor." It is believed they will send him the news that fate has solved the problem.

Comox District

Reporters Seek Meeting On School Board Ruling

COURTENAY—Three of the four newspaper reporters in the Courtenay-Cumberland-Comox district said Wednesday they will seek a meeting with school board officials over a controversial resolution passed by the board Monday night.

The three reporters said they would seek clarification of the resolution, which attempts to bar publication without the board's consent of any news about board communications read at public meetings.

THREE NAMED

The three are Mrs. Ruth McKellar, who reports district news for The Daily Colonist, Gordon Horne of the Nanaimo Free Press' Courtenay bureau and Derek Rhind of the Courtenay District Free Press.

It was learned the reporters have already obtained legal advice on an unofficial basis.

TWO UNAVAILABLE

They tried Wednesday to see board chairman James Simon and secretary C. N. Peterson but both were unavailable.

The resolution was passed with no negative votes after reporters, who attend the regular public meetings of the board, quoted from letters and statements made by board members regarding Brockbank and Hemmingsway contract work on the senior high school.

LETTERS READ

The letters were read and the statements made at the board's last meeting and included a claim by one trustee that the job "looks amateurish."

Trustees later met the architect of the firm, Wade, Stockhill and Armour, in Victoria, but issued no statement Monday about that meeting.

RESOLUTION CITED

The resolution said the publication of letters by board members and employees and of discussions on the letter sometimes precede the receipt of such letters by the addressees.

It said such publication "may jeopardize" relations between the board and the recipients of the letters.

BOARD POLICY

The resolution set down as board policy that letters and discussions "be considered as confidential and therefore not for publication without the consent of the board, and that the presence of the public and press at board meetings be contingent upon such understanding."

Port Alberni Fatal Crash Brings Fines of $240

PORT ALBERNI—A young Port Alberni man was found guilty in magistrate's court Wednesday of dangerous driving in a July accident which killed his 12-year-old passenger.

Bruce Jordan was fined $200 on the dangerous driving charge by Magistrate W. E. MacLeod, then was fined another $40 on a charge of being a minor in possession of liquor.

The magistrate placed a restriction on the driving licence of Jordan, son of former Port Alberni mayor Leran Jordan, so he may use it only to drive to and from work.

Jordan's car hit a parked car on a downtown street in July. Passenger Larry Milligan suffered injuries which caused his death the next day in a Victoria hospital.

Prize Money $5,400 For Cowichan's Fair

By KLAUS MUEENTER

DUNCAN—Prize money available at the Cowichan fall fair has increased almost 30 per cent in the past four years, officials said Wednesday.

They made the statement in announcing that prize money will total $5,400 compared to $4,197 in 1960, when the hard-working team of president Miss Mary Waldon and secretary Mrs. K. Mynkantes of the Cowichan Exhibition Board took over.

SHARP INCREASE

The total also is a sharp increase from the $4,930 available last year.

The Cowichan fair, scheduled Sept. 11 and 12 this year, is a Class B fair. Such events must have $3,000 in prizes in the livestock, breeding, field crop, vegetable, fruit, honey and district exhibit divisions.

The officials said the pet show, which provided a "first" last year with a youngster-and-dog race, will have its first youngster-and-dog race this time. The handler must hold on to the leash and the first dog across the line wins.

The dog race, open to small and large breeds, will be held on the morning of Sept. 12. The calf race, open to Jerseys, Guernseys, Holsteins, Ayrshires and all beef breeds, will be held at 6 p.m. the same day.

Lake Cowichan

Regatta Island's Largest

LAKE COWICHAN — Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Pearkes will officially open the Lake Cowichan regatta at Lakeview Park on the lakeshore in the early afternoon Sunday.

The program for the ninth annual Kiwanis-sponsored regatta, the largest event of its kind on Vancouver Island, will run all day.

DAY'S HIGHLIGHT

The highlight will be the crowning of the Lady of the Lake during the afternoon, at which the vice-regal couple will officiate again.

Eleven Cowichan district girls are in the race for the title. The winner will go to next year's Pacific National Exhibition queen contest in Vancouver.

Other regatta features will be Pacific Northwest speed boat racing, swimming races for children and a display by Vancouver kite flier Rudy Tusche. There is no admission charge for children under 15 years.

Wind-Blown Sapling Fells Man

Cobble Hill resident Alfred Flick, 67, was reported in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria last night with head injuries suffered Tuesday on Salt Spring Island.

He was visiting a logging site on Bold Bluff when he was hit on the head by a wind-blown sapling. Mr. Flick was taken to Victoria by speedboat, ferry and ambulance.

Alderman Takes Oath Claims Council Seat

ALBERNI — New Ald. John Williamson took the oath of office, and his seat at the council table, during this week's regular city council meeting.

He was elected by acclamation recently to fill the post left vacant by the resignation of Ald. George Dunbar, who was transferred to the mainland by MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd.

MANAGER ACTS

City manager James Sawyer officiated during the brief swearing-in ceremony.

Ald. Williamson was appointed chairman of the water and sewer utilities committee and will also act on the public works, health and welfare, and parks and properties committee.

He was named the city's representative on the library board and will be acting mayor during December in the event of the absence of Mayor Fred Bishop.

AMALGAMATION

Main item of business on the Alberni agenda, as in Port Alberni this week, was approval by council of the terms for amalgamation which will go before the voters Oct. 17.

The eight-point program was announced Aug. 18.

A series of newspaper and radio advertisements will be used by councils of the Twin Cities to enlarge on the various points.

Airmen Complete Sea Survival Study

Shawnigan Rector Injured

DUNCAN — Rev. Eric Scott, rector of the Anglican church in Shawnigan Lake, was reported in satisfactory condition last night in King's Daughters' Hospital after an accident near his home on Port Renfrew Road.

Mr. Scott, described as in his late 40s, suffered possible rib fractures and back injuries when he was cutting firewood.

He climbed onto one tree, then fell down to another.

He is also new chaplain of the Shawnigan Lake boys' school.

COURTENAY — Two dozen RCAF members who spent 10 days evaluating sea survival procedures at RCAF Station, Comox, have completed their studies under actual field conditions and returned to their Edmonton base Wednesday afternoon.

Spokesmen for the group said they consider the open-sea conditions under which their study was made adequate for survival studies.

PERMANENT

They intend to recommend to RCAF headquarters the establishment of a permanent sea survival course for RCAF crewmen.

They will also recommend some changes in sea survival equipment now being used by the RCMP.

Tally-Ho Motel

Fire Loss $5,000

NANAIMO — Damage from a fire in the Tally-Ho motel in the downtown area at noon Wednesday may be in excess of $5,000, officials of the motel said last night.

The fire began in an overheated vent above the kitchen range and spread to the false ceiling between the ground-floor kitchen and the second-floor cocktail lounge and offices. Units in the motel section of the building were not damaged but the kitchen floor was flooded and heavy smoke seeped into the dining room, lounge and beer parlor.

The floor above the kitchen had to be torn up by firemen to get at the stubborn flames and firemen were forced to use oxygen masks because of the heavy smoke.

Patrons were forced out of the dining room and lounge.

The dining room was closed for the remainder of the day but will open today.

Catering manager Reg Broome said the food loss was negligible and most of the damage was confined to heavy floor joists between the two floors.

Staff Room, Office, Hall Becoming Classrooms

GANGES—The Gulf Islands school board, faced with overcrowding in Ganges School and an expected increase in school enrolment next month, has been forced to use every available space for classrooms.

The kindergarten, begun last year with 30 pupils, will be moved to the study hall of the student dormitory on Ganges Hill. The school staff room, vice-principal's office and Mahon Hall will be turned into classrooms.

COMOX—The final passing-out parade of the summer series of training camps for navy cadets from across Canada will be held today at HMCS Quadra, the navy cadet training base on Goose Spit. Inspecting officer will be Commodore Paul Taylor of HMCS Patriot in Hamilton, Ont., naval divisions commanding officer and senior officer for all navy reserve units and cadets in Canada.

TOFINO—The MacQuinn Hotel has purchased two 21-foot vessels, the Highland Lassie and the Highland Lassie, for a cruise and water taxi service to be managed by H. Dennis Singleton, one of the partners in the hotel operation. The vessels, capable of 40 miles an hour, will be available to tourists, sports fishermen, miners, loggers and others and are expected to help open some of the more remote areas to the tourist trade.

COURTENAY—Group Captain F. G. Ireland, commanding officer of RCAF Station Comox, left Wednesday for air defence headquarters in St. Hubert, Que., to attend ceremonies honoring Air Vice-Marshal M. N. Hendrick, who is retiring as chief of the air defence command. Group Capt. Ireland piloted a T33 Silver Star jet on his trip east and will return Friday.

FULFORD—A descendant of one of the earliest families on Salt Spring Island, Mrs. Marie Wallace celebrated her 97th birthday recently in Wildwood convalescent home, surrounded by family members and old friends. Mrs. Wallace, a lifelong resident of Salt Spring Island, read numerous cards and letters of congratulations without the aid of eyeglasses.

COURTENAY—Miss Doris Vosburgh, formerly nursing supervisor in the West Kootenay health unit, has been named to a similar post in the Upper Island health unit with headquarters here. A graduate of St. Paul's nursing school in Vancouver, UBC and the University of Toronto, she completed a course at Escondido last year in psychiatric nursing.

NANAIMO—Colleen Hughes of Harewood and Verlaene Nicholl of Nanaimo escaped with cuts and bruises when an unidentified vehicle forced their car off the highway about five miles south of here. The car rolled down an embankment.

COMBLE HILL—Esquimalt Saanich MP George Chatterton will discuss the Canada Pension Plan at a meeting in Cobble Hill Hall at 7 p.m. Wednesday sponsored by the old age pensioners organization.

UCLUELET

A set of luggage was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turner at a recent farewell party in the Athletic Club hall following a turkey dinner for the couple in Ucluelet Lodge. The Turners, residents here for five years while he managed the co-op store, are moving to Vancouver where he has been promoted to a wholesaler's co-op.

GANGES

A rummage sale will be held in Mahon Hall Sept. 12 at 10 a.m. by the women's auxiliary to Lady Minto Gulf Islands Hospital. Donations of clothing and other items, new or old, may be left at the hospital basement before Sept. 11. Mrs. W. E. Dipple is the convener.

PORT ALBERNI

Pink salmon are expected through Alberni Inlet in increasing numbers during the next few weeks as they return to the artificial spawning grounds at Robertson Creek. Sports fishermen are asked to report pink catches to the fisheries department so records can be kept.

FULFORD

The local Garden Club here will hold a chrysanthemum and fall flower show Sept. 19 in the Fulford Community Hall. Salt Spring artists are invited to display their paintings. Miss Gwen Ruckle of Beaver Point is in charge of the art exhibit.

DUNCAN

Cyclist Allan Ferro, 7, of Duncan, escaped with face and head cuts and bruises Tuesday when his vehicle went into the path of a car on Government Street. He was taken to his home.

WELLINGTON

A short time later, two pairs of coveralls were taken from a Chevron service station in Wellington. Also overnight, a BA station in Wellington was entered. Thieves took about $10 in change from a cigarette machine, then stole a panel truck which had been left for repairs by owner R. M. Priestly of Wellington. The truck was found abandoned in the middle of the highway near the station.

By BEA HAMILTON

Last year—on a Friday the 13th—A. A. Higginbotham, manager of the B.C. Telephone Co. in Victoria, told Gulf Islanders that "automation in the form of dial telephones would come next year."

Well, next year arrived the other day—and with it: a few days of complete confusion.

Islanders cut the specified wires at midnight one Saturday and kept their fingers crossed, only to find B.C. Tel. had its lines crossed.

The first indication of trouble for this home came at 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Mr. Murphy

The phone rang, doubly startling at that hour, and a voice asked anxiously if Mr. Murphy was there.

Told he was not, the voice said desperately, "Oh dear! Our numbers are ALL wrong!" and the lady hung up.

Many Islanders were startled through the wee small hours by the mysterious ringing of their new phones.

Further up the road, neighbors like Eric Faure were ready to send smoke signals to get messages out.

Not Even O

He couldn't even get an answer when dialling O.

Further up the road, neighbors found all phones rang when one rang, so Rolands, Kilgours and La Fortunes all answered each ring and sorted out the correct messages in neighborly fashion.

So far this has worked fairly well. Mrs. Betty Drummond wanted to get Mrs. A. Davis and Mrs. D. Morrison answered, suggesting that Mrs. Drummond "dial our number and you'll get Mrs. Davis." It worked.

Finger Lost

Eventually, all was straightened out and we'll soon be forgetting all this upset.

But we won't forget the switchboard girl in a hurry. It was something like cutting off a finger to snip those wires which automatically dropped the girls from the office.

Who now will take our little messages and relay them when we are too busy to phone, or want to go to bridge or a ball game? Not that new dial phone!

No Names

The switchboard girls didn't even have to have names. They knew all the voices on the Island.

For instance, a voice would phone breathlessly:

"Look, operator, I have to go to ball practice. Tell my husband the beans are on the back of the stove and for him to turn the heat on when he comes in. I'm late now!"

Did the operator panic? No, sir. She quietly marked a bit of paper and pinned it on the wall: "Harry—beans for supper—Mary at ball game."

Poor Mary

Or an overexcited lady would call: "Operator, send the baby to Mary. She's having a doctor."

The operator would translate, and phone the doctor. Now we have "graduated" and are automated.

We'll get used to it but we'll miss chief operator Miss J. Overend and her helpers. Mrs. M. Gardner, Mrs. M. Williamson, Mrs. D. Deacon, Mrs. Ellen Bennett, Mrs. D. Fanning, Mrs. T. Easwaker, Mrs. D. Goodman, Mrs. S. Hally, Mrs. C. Leggett and Mrs. D. Parsons.

We'll miss them, but we won't forget them.

Romney Calls Strike Talks

'Best for Job' Humphrey Wins

ATLANTIC CITY (UPI)—President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were nominated by acclamation at a tumultuous session of the Democratic National Convention Wednesday to head the party's ticket in the 1964 U.S. election.

President Johnson himself was in the convention hall at the moment, on the eve of his 56th birthday, when the delegates roared approval to a motion that his nomination be made by acclamation.

HIS CHOKER
Then, taken to the podium and booming out "It's wonderful to be with you here tonight," he told the convention that the 53-year-old Minnesota senator was his choice as running mate when he seeks election this November in his own right.

From the podium he went to a seat in the presidential box and beamed approval while the convention ratified his choice.

TRADITION BROKEN
He had broken tradition to come here to do so. But it was a piece of showmanship that brought the convention to life and turned the convention hall and the city into a whirlwind of noise and gaiety.

This was Lyndon Baines Johnson's convention, and his night, and he simply wasn't going to stay in Washington away from the old-fashioned political hoopla that marked the gathering of a party already in power.

ACCEPTS TONIGHT
He will accept the nomination tonight, but it is not to be a day of happiness. It is, instead, a day set aside for tributes to dead Democratic heroes—primarily John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Wednesday, however, was different. It was summed up in the words of Lady Bird Johnson, who watched the Texas-style demonstrations on the floor and said, "I didn't know it would be like this."

NOMINATORS
Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who saw Kennedy killed and who himself was wounded Nov. 22, joined California Gov. Edmund G. Brown in formally offering Johnson's name to the packed convention.

The hall exploded into an old-fashioned political demonstration, complete with air horns, confetti, seas of banners, parachutes bearing tiny American flags, balloons, and songs such as "The Eyes of Texas are Upon You."

'BEST MAN'
Johnson tabbed Humphrey—"The best man in America for this job."

Humphrey and Johnson embraced on the convention platform while the delegates below wild.

SOME DISCORD
All was not complete harmony on the seething floor, however. Georgia Gov. Carl E. Sanders was nominated by Alabama. Sanders immediately declined and urged the convention to ratify Humphrey.

And Gov. Albert S. Harrison of Virginia told a reporter that Humphrey was not the choice of his delegation or of Virginia. He said Virginia was conservative and that Humphrey had a liberal record.

Aga Khan's Launch Hits Rock

Margaret Shipwrecked?

OLBIA, Sardinia (AP)—Unconfirmed reports Wednesday night said Princess Margaret and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, were shipwrecked Wednesday but reached shore safely.

The reports said Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth, reached shore in a dinghy after a yacht owned by the Aga Khan struck a rock.

The accident is reported to have taken place near the island of Mortorio, north of Sardinia, where the princess is spending a three-week holiday.

The reports of the incident gave this account: The motor launch Amaloun was skirting the island of Mortorio in the early afternoon. It was moving close to shore when it ran against a rock and ground to a halt.

The rock opened a hole in the side of the vessel and it began taking water.

The passengers put on life jackets and got into the small lifeboat carried by the Amaloun. They landed on Mortorio where they waited until another boat came and took them back to Porto Cervo.

Quiet Exodus to West

East Germans Opening Jails

BONN (UPI)—East Germany is quietly releasing West Germans and West Berliners held as political prisoners in Communist jails, it was learned today.

Informed sources said the released prisoners were being returned by buses to West Germany. The buses pass through the East-West Germany border crossing point at Wartha.

The sources said the two Germans may have come to some quiet agreement to ease tensions "by mutual example."

This would be similar to the informal agreement between the United States and Russia to reduce nuclear stockpiles.

NUMBER UNKNOWN
The number of West Germans released so far was not known. The German government has said 12,000 political prisoners are in East German jails. Only a fraction of them—possibly about 1,000—are West Germans or West Berliners, however.

West German authorities on Monday released East German publisher Guenter Hofe without explanation. He had spent 10 months under investigative arrest for alleged espionage.

One eyewitness reported about 20 casualties including a German television cameraman named Scheeler.

Stickers Boost New Flag

OTTAWA (UPI)—A letter purported to be signed by Minister Without Portfolio Yvon Dupuis is being distributed to Liberal MPs urging them to buy and sell stickers with the new maple leaf flag design on them.

The letter says the members can obtain the car stickers for $25 per thousand or 2 1/2 cents each and recommends that they be distributed to the most important garage managers in the ridings of members.

The garage managers, the letter says, could then distribute them to each client who buys at his station.

The letter states: "I believe that each member should sell at least 1,000 of the most important service stations in his riding."

Thant Recommends UN Cyprus Pullout

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Secretary-General U Thant said Wednesday night he will hand his recommendation on discontinuing a UN peace-keeping force in Cyprus to the Security Council early next month. The force includes 1,130 Canadians. (See also Page 18.)

Thant told a reporter he has given up the idea of expanding the force of about 6,700 men from 13 countries because he has had no response to his request for $2,000,000 in a hurry to pay the remainder of the force's costs, estimated at $12,000,000.

The UN is considering an 80-per cent reduction in the force.

Mr. Pearson said no such suggestion has been received from the UN. Rather, the UN was considering an increase in the size of the force but Canada had received no request to supply more troops. The Canadian contingent numbers 1,130.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who based his question on an Associated Press report from Nicosia that the UN is considering an 80-per cent reduction in the force.

MIAMI BLINDED

MIAMI (UPI)—Killer Hurricane Cleo hit Miami with wind gusts of more than 110 miles an hour early today, blowing away the U.S. National Hurricane Centre's wind measuring instrument and plunging the big city into total darkness under a blanket of deluging rain.

The barometer fell rapidly to 28.94 inches and the weather bureau reported it was still going down early today.

It was the first hurricane to hit Miami since Sept. 10, 1950 when devastating Hurricane Donna crossed the Florida keys and flung 90 mph winds across the city.

RASH OF LOOTING
There were no immediate reports of casualties.

As the storm hit, police reported a rash of plate glass windows popping out, trees falling and looting of liquor stores. Most of the looting was confined at first to the central negro district, authorities said.

RAKE RICH COAST
The weather bureau said the storm was travelling a course slightly west of due north at about 12 m.p.h., a path which apparently will rake most of the rich coastline with hurricane winds for 65 miles north to Palm Beach.

Before threatening Florida, Cleo had a trail of death and destruction through the Caribbean. It killed 14 persons and caused $63,000,000 in property damage when it hit Guadeloupe last Saturday.

Seven more persons were killed in floods on the south coast of the Dominican Republic. Then the hurricane tore into the southwest corner of Haiti with the full force of 140-mile-per-hour winds Monday night.

Premier Fidel Castro blacked out all public reports of casualties and damage in Cuba where Cleo spent about 24 hours, then reported to the world his island actually benefited because of the heavy rains brought to the crops.

Before the news ban, however, one death was reported and the government said it had rescued 6,000 peasants from low-lying areas.

Union Approves Chrysler Strike

A strike was authorized against Chrysler at 10 a.m. Sept. 9 if no new agreement is reached with the company, smallest of the auto industry's big three.

Closer to Ensign?

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is ready to accept major compromises in its proposal for a national flag for Canada, it was learned Wednesday night.

Overtures already have been made to backbench opposition MPs by at least one government supporter for designs described as more closely resembling the Red Ensign than the maple leaf

now proposed by the government. (See also Page 3.)

A basic plan of the government's flag platform, however, still is that there should be a national flag for Canada that cannot be confused with the flag of any other country.

This rules out any adaptation of the Red Ensign, which is similar to the flags of a number of Commonwealth countries and British colonies and is based on the British merchant marine flag—the Union Jack in one corner on a field of red.

But an adaptation of the Red Ensign—itselt a variation of the so-called blue ensign—might be acceptable to the government as a flag representing Canada's loyalty to the Queen and membership in the Commonwealth.

At least, this proposition has been advanced privately and informally to the Conservatives by a prominent Liberal.

As a flag for Canada's national identity, apart altogether from its Queen and Commonwealth connection, one of the flag designs tentatively suggested by Liberal go-betweens in their private meetings with opposition supporters is a radical variation of the maple leaf flag.

Its background would be pale blue—similar to the color of the United Nations' flag and a shade that also appears in the flags of a number of other countries with long histories of independence.
